UNDERCLOTHING.
We think there are few ladies now in Sydney—we had almost said the colony—who have to learn where they can safely and advantageously purchase such goods as we have to offer in this department. DRESS MATERIALS EXTRAORDINARY.
Our Stock in this department was never so varied and extensive as it is this season. It embraces the most fashionable fabrics from the English and Continental markets, at prices, in many instances, below manufacturers' lists. Our leading specialities include—Grey Beiges, at 6d, 7½d, 8½d; Homespun Beiges, 7½d, 8½d, 9½d, 1s, and upwards. Chuddah Tweeds, 1s; a remarkable parcel of these goods, quality for price; must clear them directly. Scarborough Serges in all the new dark colours for the season, 10½d per yard, a fabric of fashion, and specially suited to the season; Devon Serges, 1s. The new Dress Cloth, 1s 6d. Check Beiges, for children's school dresses, 6½d. Our special Killiecrankie Tweeds, 1s 9d for 30 years; and the Kilmarnock Serges at 18d a yard, a superior texture for travelling, specially adapted, warm, strong, and such as will certainly command an immense sale. Embroidered Robes in Tweed, at 25s 6d; ditto in self-coloured Diagonals, at 37s 6d.
All the above are confidently submitted to our patrons as seasonable textures, warm, and wear resisting, excellent in appearance, and at prices unparalleled. The tremendous growth of patronage, felt in this department perhaps more than in any other, evidences alike the public appreciation in securing the BEST GOODS at LOWEST PRICES, and our determination to meet the requirements of a rapidly increasing trade.
FOR EVENING WEAR we note amongst our almost endless variety the following:—Madras Muslins, from 9½d per yard; Fine Llamas, from 1s 3d. The Japan Unis, 1s 9d; Pekin Sein, 1s 9d. Cashmeres, specially imported for this counter, at 2s 6d, and a curiously fine quality at 3s 6d. FARMER and COMPANY.

BLANKETS.
Our Sale this season stands unprecedented, and, as in no previous season has our stock been so thoroughly and extensively assorted. We still hold the first place in this market. Our unrivalled GUINEA BLANKET still holds its own, notwithstanding the host of imitations, and the sale this season is simply incredible. We beg to quote, as worthy of note, the following:—We begin at 6s 11d per pair, and rise in prices from 1s to 2s 6d per pair, up to 120s. In mentioning our higher prices we would announce the opening of our season's supply of the TASMANIAN PURE WOOL GOODS, which have established a reputation in our market. We fear nothing, as we have before said, for these goods, so long as they present the appearance they do, and the standard of excellence already attained remains unaltered.
FARMER and COMPANY.

WINTER HOSIERY.
This department has taken a lead with us, and the reason is, we have just what you want, both for quality and price. We are just now offering 500 dozen of Cashmere Hose, ladies' and children's sizes, at 9½d per pair, a few days' supply for us, and we scarcely expect to repeat such a marvel of cheapness. Wool Shawlettes, from 7d to 2s 6d; Hoods, from 1s 11d to 10s 6d; Opera or Travelling Hoods, from 4s 6d to 10s 6d. We are prepared to see Fanny, with her sisters, cousins, and aunts, for the wonderfully cheap hosiery AT FARMER'S.

HIGH CLASS TAILORING.
In our Department for CLOTHING TO ORDER, we respectfully claim special attention; the fact of our keeping so fully employed an immense and experienced staff, is a proof of the success which attends our efforts here. We are now showing a splendid range of seasonable goods, consisting of the best qualities of Scotch, English, and French woollens. Please note the following:—Fashionable Sac Suits, in Scotch Tweed, 75s, 80s; West of England ditto, 80s, 85s, 90s, 95s; Trousers, 20s, 22s 6d, 25s, and specially note that all Garments made to order are hand-sewn, will shrunk, and in point of value, quality, and finish stand unequalled.
FARMER and COMPANY.

The Derby, made of medium weight in Melton cloth, nice light shades of drab and fawn with velvet collars to match at 27s 6d, and the Sergette Overcoat in good shades of gray and drab at 22s and 27s 6d, are amongst our most attractive garments. All of these are gentlemanly in appearance, well finished, and approved by our London buyers.
FARMER and COMPANY.

The Speciality at 27s 6d, and a very superior garment at 37s 6d are noticeably seasonable extra long. Lined throughout, patterns good; have already commanded an extensive sale on this floor, and deserve our highest recommendation.
FARMER and COMPANY.

GENTLEMEN'S UNDERCLOTHING.
Owing to the care and energy exercised by our buyers for this important department, we are to-day prepared with an assortment complete for all requirements in Undershirts, Pants, and Drawers, in the following textures:—White and Coloured Merino, Balbriggan and other makes of cotton, Spun Silk, Dressed Silk, Cashmere, Lambswool, Vecuna, &c. Our "ARCTIC" goods are specially imported for invalids and travellers to cold regions. They are of a flexible texture, with soft fleecy lining, worthy of note to any requiring warmth, combined with lightness.

FURNITURE.
For excellence of workmanship nothing can beat our CHALLENGE DRAWING-ROOM SUITES, consisting of nine pieces, made of Walnut, elegant in design, and capable of a great deal of wear and tear. Our price for this Suite is £31, and though we can supply suites below and above this price, we know of no suite that will give the public such general satisfaction. For small rooms nothing can be better than to make up the suite according to the size of the room, and for those who desire to furnish in this way we have the largest, tastiest, and most complete assortment to be found this side of the Equator. It has been our constant study to perfect the lines of the chairs we are showing, and judging from the satisfaction we have given our customers our efforts have not been misdirected. Here are some of our quotations for this class of furniture, which will compare with those of any other establishment in Sydney, and these prices are for articles stuffed with hair and finished in the best possible style.

CARPET DEPARTMENT.
Our consignments include an assortment of the best results of the most eminent manufacturers. High art displayed in the days of Queen Elizabeth and Anne is reproduced to-day under the hands of artists who have brought their cultured ideas to bear on the magnificence displayed in those periods of antique splendour, and have combined with this all that can be admired in our modern aestheticism. The lavish display of designs in Early English, Geometrical, Floral, and Japanese renders the selection of a floor covering a task of real delight, whilst the colourings introduced cannot but charm the most artistic eye. By the latest mails we have landed some hundreds of cases in Wilton, Brussels, and Tapestry, to which we invite inspection; and as our prices are WHOLESALE, we can confidently say that for cheapness we cannot be surpassed. Our stair coverings are in Wilton, Brussels, Tapestry, Dutch, Damask, and Twine Carpetings, in all widths, and in such variety as to please the most fastidious.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.—An External Means of CURING SKIN DISEASES. There is scarcely any eruption but will yield to "Sulpholine" in a few days, and commence to fade away, even if it seems past cure. Ordinary pimples, redness, blotches, scurf, roughness, vanish as if by magic; whilst old, enduring skin disorders that have plagued the sufferers for years, however deeply rooted they may be, "Sulpholine" will successfully attack them. It destroys the animalculæ which cause these unsightly, irritable, painful affections, and always produces a clear, healthy, natural condition of the skin. "Sulpholine" Lotion is sold by most Chemists. Bottles, 2s 9d. Prepared by J. PEPPER and CO., London. Kept by ELLIOT BROTHERS.

TARAXACUM and PODOPHYLLIN.—Prepared only by J. Pepper and Co., London. It sets the sluggish liver in motion, very slightly acts on the bowels, giving a sense of health and comfort within 24 hours. It is the safest medicine. Taraxacum and Podophylin is a fluid made only by J. PEPPER and CO., Bedford Laboratory, London, whose name is on every label. Bottles, 2s 9d and 4s 6d. Sold by all Chemists. A most valuable essential medicine for Australia and Colonies generally. Kept by ELLIOT BROTHERS, Sydney.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Mr. Crane, S.M., adjudicated yesterday on the criminal side, and Mr. Dillon, S.M., on the summons side of the Court.

Alfred Kelly was required to account for a pair of boots found in his possession, and failing to satisfy his Worship, was sentenced to be imprisoned one month.

James Chalker was charged with having stolen portions of crane gear, of the value of £35, the property of Robert Saunders. Sergeant Roden deposed that in the forenoon of Monday he proceeded with a search warrant to prisoner's iron yard, Pyrmont, accompanied by Robert Saunders, of Pyrmont, a quarrymaster, and found five pieces of iron (produced), which Saunders claimed as portion of crane gear which had been stolen from his wharf; prisoner was present, and said that he had sent to prosecutor's wharf for some pieces of iron, found in his yard, which he thought belonged to him; two persons were committed for trial on Monday for stealing other portions of the gear, one of whom said that prisoner sent him for it, and for doing so gave him a shilling for a drink. Robert Saunders, of Pyrmont, quarrymaster, deposed to the five pieces of iron before the Bench having been found by the last witness in his presence among a quantity of other broken iron in prisoner's yard, and that they are part of the cheek of a crane; he missed some pieces of the crane a fortnight ago, other parts a week later, and on Saturday last another portion was taken away, in respect of which two men named Lyons and Ephraim are under committal for trial at the Quarter Sessions; he valued the stolen portions at £35, and the whole crane at £45. Cross-examined by Mr. Roberts, jun.: On Monday last the prisoner sent to him three or four hundred weight of broken iron; had known prisoner a long time, and always believed him to be an honest man. Mr. Roberts called several witnesses for the defence to show that his client had no knowledge of the character of the iron, nor, in respect of some of it, how or when or by whom it was brought to his yard, and submitted that there was no case to be sent on to a jury. His Worship thought that he had no alternative but to commit the defendant for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

In the Summons Court, five defendants were fined in sums varying from 5s. to 20s. on the prosecution of Inspector Oram, for breaches of the Transit Commissioner's bylaws. In Curran v. Curran, a proceeding under the Deserted Wives Act, an order was made for payment of 10s. a week; and in Prescott v. Prescott, a proceeding of like character, an order was made for payment of 15s. a week.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Mr. Marsh, S.M., disposed of the business in the Charge Court, and Mr. Buchanan, S.M., that in the Summons Court, yesterday.

Thomas M'Ardell, 27, and Ann M'Ardell, 25, were charged with stealing a lady's felt skirt, value 3s. 11d., the property of Enoch Simmons. They were convicted and sentenced, the former to two months' hard labour in Darlinghurst gaol, and the latter to seven days.

John Kelly, 24, and Thomas M'Ardell, charged with stealing a lady's ulster, value 32s. 6d., the property of M. Moran, of Oxford-street, were sentenced, Kelly to six months' hard labour, and M'Ardell to one month's hard labour in Darlinghurst gaol. The prisoners were seen by a witness named Thomas Mooney, a vanman, to take the ulster, and he gave information to Constable Stuart, who afterwards arrested them from the description received. Mr. Marsh complimented Mooney on his conduct.

Robert Williams, alias Edward Barrett, 40, was charged with "being supplied with four glasses of liquor" in the Kilkenny Inn, Fitzroy-street, by Patrick O'Meilly, agent for James Brierly, the licensee, and refusing to pay a reasonable sum therefor. Defendant pleaded guilty. He said he was a stranger in Sydney, having only recently arrived from Hay. To be imprisoned for 48 hours.

Benjamin Ghilone was fined 20s., with 2s. 6d. costs, for furious driving; Alfred Sly was fined 40s. for a similar offence.

Thomas Ryan was fined 40s. for playing at pitch and toss.

Ah Fong, 27, was charged with an offence. Mr. Lowe defended the prisoner, who was committed for trial at the next Quarter Sessions.

Before Mr. Addison, S.M., Richard Byrnes, 20, was charged with stealing 12lb. of butter, value £1 8s., the property of Captain Seabury, of the steamship City of Sydney. Prisoner, who was a messboy on board the ship, was caught in the act of lowering the butter, which was in a bucket, into a boat alongside the ship, when he was caught in the act by the second officer. To be imprisoned for two months, with hard labour.

Before Mr. Marsh, S.M., Charles Hibble, 15, was charged with stealing a cask of files, valued £20, the property of Eliza Tinsley. Mr. Gibbs, who appeared for the defendant, applied to have him dealt with under the Industrial Schools Act, as he was under the age 16, and he (defendant) would then plead guilty. The application was granted, and defendant was remanded to be dealt with until Friday.

Before Mr. J. Buchanan, S.M., Albert Hyman and James Cook were charged by warrant, with stealing files, screws, and tacks, value £20, the property of Eliza Tinsley. Mr. W. Roberts, sen., appeared for the prosecution; Mr. W. J. Hill appeared for Hyman, and Mr. S. Bull for Cook. Senior-constable Lee and Constable Joyce first gave evidence. The latter stated that he had watched Hyman's shop at Newtown for nine days, at the end of which period he saw both prisoners taking a quantity of goods from Hyman's place to Macintosh and Sons, in Pitt-street; he afterwards ascertained that both prisoners had sold quantities of goods, similar to those described in the information, to various firms engaged in the hardware trade. Having gained a clue as to where the goods originally came from, they followed it up by waiting upon Mr. Tindale, the manager of Tinsley's stores, and asking him whether he had lost any goods. The box of files which Hibble pleaded guilty to stealing was found to be gone, and he was given in custody for the theft. The prisoners before the Court were then arrested by warrant, and a quantity of the property was found on Hyman's premises. Representatives from Messrs. Lassetter and Co., Briscoe, Drysdale, and Co., Macintosh and Son, J. T. Selden, and a number of others engaged in the hardware trade, were called, and deposed to having purchased property of the description stated in the charge, and portions of which were produced in Court, from either one or the other prisoner, or from both. The price paid was generally below the market value, but prisoners on those occasions either represented that they were "job lots" obtained at auction, or implied that they were so obtained. The following evidence was then adduced:—Charles Hibble deposed that he had been brought before this Court for stealing some files, and he elected to be dealt with summarily, and pleaded guilty; he is under the age of 16, and he was willing to give evidence in this case; he was in the service of the firm carrying on business as Eliza Tinsley, as clerk; the manager over witness was Mr. Charles Tindale; if Mr. Tindale were absent from the stores, witness attended to the business; there were two keys to the warehouse door; Mr. Tindale had one, and witness the other; witness was charged with stealing a cask of files, to which he pleaded guilty; they were taken about a fortnight ago without the consent or knowledge of Mr. Tindale; they were lowered down by a lift on to a dray, witness and the carter superintending the loading; they went to Hyman's at Newtown; witness knew this, because he went with the cart himself; this took place at about 6 o'clock in the evening, and witness closed the stores immediately afterwards; the cask was marked with 53 in circle, with I in centre; there were more goods of a similar description in store; having gone to Newtown in company with the vanman; witness delivered the goods in Hyman's store at about 7 o'clock; Hyman was out at the time; he asked witness to take them there; that was not the first time witness had taken goods there from the store; witness saw Hyman afterwards, the same evening, about the goods; he was in the shop; Hyman carried on business as a tobacconist, &c.; the cask of files was rolled into the front of the shop; it was about half-past 8 when witness saw Hyman; told him that he had brought the cask, and they both then unpacked it; the cask contained Lockwood's files; after the files were unpacked he sorted the various sizes and took a list of them; he told witness he was going to sell them; witness had no authority from anyone to remove those goods from the store; Hyman asked witness on the day previous to take them; he was not to pay witness anything, but he promised to give witness a share in the profits he made upon them; witness stole the goods and defrauded and cheated his employer; different carters were employed in removing goods on other occasions; William Thomas and Owen M'Bride were two of the vanmen employed to take goods out to Hyman's; Hyman gave witness about £30 altogether, and £7 on the last lot, the cask of files; witness actually received altogether about £12 in money; witness had a running account at Hyman's, and he deducted from the profits on the goods what was owing; the value of the whole of the goods sent to Hyman's was about £100; he became acquainted with Hyman about six months ago, having been introduced to him by a young fellow of about his own age; witness went there night and day afterwards; they used to play cards there, occasionally for money, and witness got in debt to Hyman to the extent of 12s. or 14s.; witness played dice with him for various things in the shop, and was unable to pay him; sometimes witness won, and got things from the shop; when witness was unable to pay, he told Hyman that he would not be able to give him the money for a week; Hyman then asked witness where he was working, and witness told him at Tinsley's, in Pitt-street; he said he knew Tinsley's at home, and had done business with them there; he then asked witness if he could get him a sample of nails, files, or anything imported, and witness said yes, he could get them, and supplied him with samples of nails at his shop; the samples were on a card; Heyman said that he might be able to sell them; witness afterwards sold him some samples of files, and told him that he got them from the store at which he was working; the files were in packages, and witness gave him two; they were worth about 5s.; when witness took him these packages of files, it was only with the intention of showing them to him as samples; witness told him that he would take them back to the stores, but Hyman pressed him to sell them; he said he would take 6s. off witness's account, and he kept the files; witness owed him the 12s. at this time, about six months ago; after that, witness ceased to visit him for a time, but one day witness was passing his shop, and he (Hyman) called him in; this was about a week after witness had ceased to call on him; he asked witness if he could get him any more files of a larger size; witness said, "No," and told him he would be dismissed if he sold any more than the samples; witness got samples of larger files, and delivered them to him at the shop—half a dozen, one package; he then "squared" witness's account; he wanted some more after this, but witness told him he could not get any more; he then asked witness how he got the others, and witness said he had the keys of the place; one night he asked witness to go into town with him, and witness complied with his request; they strolled around town, and had two or three drinks together; the drink had an effect upon him; Hyman had a carpet bag, which he brought from Newtown with him; he then said he must have those samples, as he wanted to sell them; they then went down to the store together, and witness unlocked the door and they went inside; witness gave him the files, which were worth about 30s.; he remained outside whilst witness went inside and got the files; they took it in turns to carry the carpet bag to the 'bus, and then went out to Newtown together; when they first went in to the store together there was a couple of raps made on the door, but neither of them took any notice of them; they had no light; witness knew where the things were; Hyman told him (witness) to go outside and lock him (Hyman) in; that he thought they were the police—that was when the knocks were given; he did not give witness any money that night, but he did afterwards—about £1; witness thought he kept away from Hyman for a time, but some days afterwards he called witness in again and said he wanted some more stuff; witness said he could not get any more; he said that witness would have to get it, or he would tell that he (witness) had taken some goods previously; on the following Saturday witness took him some more goods from the stores without the knowledge or consent of Mr. Tindale; this was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon; the store was closed at 1 o'clock; files, horse nails, copper rivets, screws, and twine were amongst the things taken; they were not samples; they were taken from bulk; witness thought they were worth £12 or £14, but Hyman said their value was only £7; witness got £2 as his share; witness paid the cartage, 6s., from the wharf to Newtown; Hyman knew that witness got the goods from the stores; he said that he had sold some of the goods to Crawford and Co. and others, but witness could not remember the names; Hyman had a room off his shop where they used to go when they were stealing the goods; witness used to stop there till about 1 o'clock at night; there were other young fellows there of an evening, some about the same age as witness and others older; they used to play cards there; Hyman lived in a private house adjoining his shop; witness was the only one who used to go into the private house: Hyman had brandy there, and witness used to drink it; he gave it to others to drink also; witness used to go in to the shop nearly every morning, and he used to tell witness what he had won and what he had lost; witness brought about seven more lots of goods to Hyman's shop, of the same description as those mentioned before; he used to tell witness that he sold them; witness was not always conscious when he was drinking brandy, but he was sure the keys did not go out of his possession: Cook borrowed witness's bunch of keys from him the day before he was arrested; witness's watchkey was amongst the keys, and witness lent them to him to wind his watch; he evidently forgot to return them as he did not give them back to witness; Cook afterwards gave them back to witness's mother; one night witness went to sleep on the sofa in Hyman's place, and did not wake until about 5 o'clock the next morning; witness knew Cook before he (witness) went to Hyman's; had seen him there nearly every day during the past six months; he had been there when witness was playing cards with others; had seen him (Cook) playing cards with others, but witness only played with him once; Hyman said he sold the goods to Lassetter and Co., and Briscoe, Drysdale, and Co., in the city, and Palmer, Scurr, Harrison, Thompson, and others at Newtown, besides a man on the South Head-road named Horne; Hyman bought 3 or 4 cwt. of paint from Tinsley's stores after witness began to steal; he paid cash for it; witness had power to sell goods in the absence of the manager, Mr. Tindale, and what goods were sold were supposed to be entered in the books; none of those goods which Hyman received were entered in the books; all the goods that witness stole were taken to Hyman's place; Hyman had spoken to witness about the key of the store, saying he would like to have a duplicate of it; this was in Hyman's shop; he said he would like to make an impression of the key; it would have been possible for him to have taken an impression of it whilst prisoner was under the influence of the brandy; witness refused to take any more goods, because he said they would be missed; Cook and witness went out for a drive in a buggy to Bondi and then to Sans Souci; they each paid half-a-sovereign; witness was getting 10s. a week at the time; witness was away for two days, and took the holidays himself. At this stage the case was again adjourned, but before the adjournment took place Mr. Roberts said that the boy Hibble had been misled, and entrapped into the commission of a crime, and his case was not one that merited any severe punishment under the circumstances. He had borne a very good character, and his employers were quite satisfied that if he had not got into the company of the defendants he would not have been in the position he was. The hearing of the case was again proceeded with, and the following additional evidence was taken:—Naomi Hibble, mother of James Hibble, deposed that her son is 15 years and 6 months old; knows both prisoners; her son resided with her at Newtown, scarcely five minutes' walk from Hyman's place; recollected last Friday week; he was not at home that day, but returned in the evening; he was then quite stupefied; witness could not say whether it was from drink; he was quite helpless; did not know how he got over it; never saw him in such a state as that before; on the following day she had occasion to go near the stores of his employer; did not know that he had been absent from his duties on Thursday and Friday until Saturday morning; it was about 12 o'clock when witness went to the stores, but did not go in; whilst there saw prisoner Cook standing near the Bulletin office, a short distance from the stores; witness asked him if his name was Cook, and he said yes; then asked him if he was waiting for Charlie Hibble, and he said yes; witness asked him what he was waiting for him for, and he said he did not know that he wanted him for anything particular; did not know whether he knew who witness was; witness said, "I believe Charley was away from business with you yesterday?" he said yes; witness said, "How could a young man like you entice a lad away from business?" Cook said he did not, that the boy stayed away on his own account; that was all the conversation that took place there; in the afternoon of the same day, at about 4 o'clock, saw Cook again at witness's house; witness made enquiries that afternoon in respect to her son; she sent her daughter to Hyman's, and she returned; Cook and Hyman came to witness's house about half-an-hour afterwards; witness saw both of them; Hyman said, "This is Mr. Cook, Mrs. Hibble"; witness said, "Yes, I have seen you before, why were you loitering about for my boy to-day"; Cook said, "I want to give him his keys"; witness said "how did you come by his keys?" he said he borrowed them, or that witness' son lent them to him to wind his watch last night, and he must have put them in his pocket and forgotten to give them back to Charley"; he gave witness the keys; witness was sure her son had not his keys on Friday night, because she searched his pockets; Hyman did not give any reason for his calling on witness; Hyman was at witness' house in the morning of the same day; he said he had lent witness' son a watch, and as her son had not left it, he (Hyman) had called round to see about it; witness said was he not foolish to lend a lad like that a watch, and he said, "No, that he knew him so well, and he was sure that he would leave it in the morning;" Hyman was there that day four times altogether; the last time he came to witness's place he brought some cheques, which he said were "the firm's;" Mr. Tindale was there at the time; Hyman said that Charley had given him the cheques to give to Mr. Tindale; Mr. Tindale took the cheques. Joseph Gommessen deposed to having purchased a dozen of files from Cook; he had used six of them, and the other five he had given back to the police; prisoner Cook said he was selling on his own account; witness gave him an order for a dozen half-round files, the price he quoted for which was 12s.; witness paid him, but got no receipt; the goods were quite new. Martin Cahill, horseshoer and general blacksmith, carrying on business at Newtown, deposed to having bought a bundle of rasps—half-a-dozen—from prisoner Cook for 9s. 6d.; the latter said he was travelling for himself; witness paid him, but got no receipt; witness returned those he had not used to the police. Richard Lovegrove, carrying on business at Newtown as plumber and gasfitter, deposed that he bought a dozen new files from Cook about the latter end of March; they were in original packages; some of the files witness had used, the remainder he had returned to the police; witness paid 12s. cash for them; did not get a receipt; Cook said that Hyman had bought a job lot at auction, and he was selling them for him on commission. Charles Hibble, re-sworn, was further examined by Mr. Roberts, and deposed he had removed goods similar to those sold to Gommessen, Cahill, and Lovegrove from Mrs. Tinsley's stores; Cook was never at Hyman's when the goods were left there, but he was there later in the evening, sorting them out by Hyman's instructions; had seen him there in the afternoon when the goods were taken there; had heard Hyman speaking about Crampton and Co. in connection with these goods, but not Cook. Charles Tindale deposed that he knew Mr. Leonard Richard Lloyd; he is acting under power of attorney for Charles Theophilus Tinsley and Frank Evers, who carry on business as Eliza Tinsley, Sydney, New South Wales; witness is also acting for Mr. Lloyd, under the power of attorney produced; the business is carried on under the style of Eliza Tinsley; in consequence of information received from the police, witness examined the stock in the warehouse, between Pitt-street and Macquarie-place, and found that a quantity of goods of the kind produced before the court were missing; they had been taken away during the past six months; the value of the goods so taken away was about £200; the cask of files which the boy Hibble was charged with stealing, came into the warehouse in May; some of the files before the Court witness recognized as a portion of that lot; the boy had charge of the store in witness' absence, and had a duplicate key; Hibble up till the discovery was always regarded as a trustworthy, honest, well-conducted boy; he had had the collection of large sums of money; witness produced the invoice of the files; the boy had no authority from witness to remove the goods; witness received a letter from Hyman, in June last, giving an order for goods corresponding exactly to those which had been taken away from the stores; the order was not complied with. Mr. Buchanan, after the evidence had all closed, said that the systematic means adopted to corrupt this boy Hibble—if the evidence given was true, and he had no reason to doubt it—were unspeakably bad. A young lad, not 16 years of age yet, went to this place night after night, and remained there drinking brandy and water, and playing cards for tobacco and other goods in the shop. At last this poor unhappy boy was tempted of the devil in the shape of one of the defendants, to steal in order to pay the debt that he owed him—to steal from his employer's stores, where up to this time he had held a respectable position, and had gained the character of a truthful honest boy. He had done this to pay this debt; but once having entered upon this course of crime he had been compelled to continue in it under a threat that he would be exposed if he did not steal more. It seemed a fiendish thing from beginning to end. Both prisoners were then formally committed to take their trial at the next Court of Quarter Sessions, commencing on 27th July next. Mr. Hill applied for bail for Cook, an application which was granted; defendant in £150, and two sureties of £100 each. Mr. Bull applied for bail for Hyman, but after consideration and consultation, Mr. Buchanan refused to grant the application on grounds which he s[...]. It would perhaps be better for him to withhold.

THE TWO-MILLION LOAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The general public of this colony can hardly be expected to trouble themselves with the merits of any measure of political or financial policy; preoccupied with the grave and important pursuits of cricket, baseball, racing, boating, fancy fairs, usury, Government subsidies, and Government billets, it is only reasonable that a new loan should be contemplated in its crudest aspect, that of providing more money, and, therefore, more idleness, more sport, and more spoil. A borrowing policy, altogether independent of future consequences, is one that seems to suit the colony at the present time. The flocks of rapacious hawks that whirl around the person of the travelling Minister for Works or Lands all want more money spent in their districts, and their numerous progress committees are suddenly inspired with life and energy as they scent from afar the prospective spoils of a new loan. But in other parts of the world, where the public still retain some regard for the obligations of propriety in business, whether it be of a public or private character, the ostentatious blowing about the colonial wealth and resources, and the ever overflowing condition of the treasury, culminating, as it has done, in a new loan, will doubtless excite some laughable comment at the expense of this colony. Is it possible that the mission to America was to open another market for colonial bonds?

In your leading article on this subject you ignore the one particular aspect of the question, the consideration of which reveals the necessity for this loan, and also the reason why it could not be floated in the colony. To explain, I will proceed to analyse the colonial position, and to test the validity and soundness of that apparent wealth and prosperity which is now being so ostentatiously heralded all over the world.

That this colony has great natural resources is undoubted; but it had the same when the blacks were its only lords. Mere resources are nothing; it is their development which is the chief factor of social prosperity and national force. A national career is the outcome of the vital energy of its people, expressed in productive result; the wealth of a country is the measure of its industrial product, not the measure of its bank paper.

It is true also that the people of this colony at the present time enjoy a fair measure of prosperity. They are, as a rule, fairly employed. But how are they employed? First, a very large proportion are employed in the Civil Service, and this seems to be a service of unlimited expansibility; secondly, another large proportion are employed in rebuilding and extending the city of Sydney; a third large proportion in public works of one kind or another all over the colony; and a fourth large proportion are employed in furnishing all these recipients of Government pay with the necessaries and luxuries of life. If the means by which all this fictitious industry is kept in action was the surplus product of national industry, the colony would have reason to boast of its position; but it is simply the outcome of an iniquitous compact between the Government, the banks, and the dummy selector. The latter selects the land, hands it to the banks, the Government is credited with the nominal value, and by this means unlimited supplies of bank paper are manufactured and put in circulation in payment for work which is all unproductive. This system constitutes the basis of that fictitious prosperity which exists in the colony, and of which the colonial representative is bragging so much. Under the cover of this, all the natural channels of popular industry are being systematically demoralized by legislative action. The land, the primary source of national wealth and prosperity, has been for many years a mere snare for honest and enterprising men; the mining industry has shared the same fate under the systematic persecution of the Legislature; the carrying trade has been taken out of the catalogue of popular industries and enterprises, and has now become a vast drain upon the public resources.

To supply the necessities and luxurious tastes which are created by the yearly distribution of three or four millions of paper capital the colony has to do a very large import trade, and this paper capital is of no value for remittances abroad. These imports have therefore to be paid for from one or all of the following sources:—Exports of colonial produce, exports of colonial gold, and exports of colonial bonds. And when we notice that the present fictitious prosperity tends not only to promote extravagance of consumption in the colony, but also tends to decrease the resources of export by drawing people away from those employments upon which productive efficiency rests, it is easy to see that the tendency of our colonial policy is to promote excessive importations, and to diminish the production of our exportable commodities.

Doubtless there are vast profits attached to the import trade, if we judge from the class of buildings erected for carrying it on; and, doubtless, the merchants possess vast paper balances to their credit in the colonial banks. These balances, however, do not define the capability of the colony for making remittances abroad; the remitting and paying power of the colony is defined by the value of those products of industry which can be spared for export upon the value of the bullion or coin which can be spared also. If the banks have no exports to draw against they must remit gold or stop payment; and as they are compelled by their charter to retain a certain proportion of coin or bullion as security to the public, when their bullion resources reach this limit they can only escape from the difficulty by the floating of a Government loan, when they can at once draw against colonial bonds.

It is therefore the depreciation in the exportable resources of the colony by drought and other causes, with, perhaps, a prospective decline in values, combined with the general extravagance and dissipation and the unproductive occupations of the people, which have rendered necessary this two-million loan, and also that the loan should be placed in England.

If the alienation of the public lands was producing settlement and active production, an eventual profit might be expected from extending railways, and a rapid increase of exportable wealth from new settled districts; but such is not the case; no increase of production follows the track of the dummy selector, and railways are being built merely for political purposes. The consequence will be that colonial financial embarrassments will increase rapidly each succeeding year. Judging from the policy pursued by the Government from the time of Sir Hercules Robinson, it has been little else than an agency of the English money lender, and a bitter and subtle enemy of every measure contributory to sound and healthy colonial progress. The boasted railway profits are a mere fiction, the chief factor in the result being the fictitious prosperity created by the policy above referred to.

The colony is drifting at a rapid pace to impoverishment and to a despotic form of government, and is being lulled by a fictitious prosperity, and by vapid senile assurances of future greatness, into complete indifference to those principles upon which permanent prosperity and freedom rest. We need not fear Russian designs; they are as nothing compared to the fate which unlimited usury and unrestrained political corruption are hurrying us to, for we are certainly drifting to industrial, financial, and political complications, incompatible with either the possession of a future national existence or the preservation of constitutional freedom. Unless the people petition the Imperial Government to deliver them from their quack statesmen and their greenhorn Parliament, there is but one humiliating alternative awaiting us, which will be the arrival of a military representative and a financial commissioner with a few regiments of sepoys in the interest of the British bondholder, when we shall be informed that having been entrusted with a domain of immense value to an industrious people, we have just scraped off its superficial wealth, and then sunk down into idleness, dissipation, and debt, dreaming that bank paper, foreign loans, and Government billets are the sure road to national greatness. When the British bondholder has taken possession of the land, he will import the Indian coolie to cultivate it, and we shall then understand that a fictitious national prosperity can be as easily concocted as a fictitious commercial prosperity, and New South Wales and other colonies will stand as shocking examples of the one, as Heugh Balfour and Co., and other firms, have done of the other class of delinquents.

We shall also understand at that time the meaning of Benjamin Disraeli's famous epigram, "Britain is more of an Asiatic than a European power."

THE AGE OF ELECTRICITY.

The following interesting extract is from an article by William Henry Preece, F.R.S., published in "Time" for May last:—

"Of all the purposes to which electricity has been applied there is, perhaps, none which is more likely to be beneficial in our domestic relations than that of illumination. Hitherto we have been content to submit either to the dulness of the ordinary candle, or to the trouble of oil lamps, or to the vitiation of gas; but now there is a prospect of, even in our own houses, being freed from danger to health and to property by the introduction of the steady, bright, and beautiful electric globe. The objections to gas are so very great its adoption in our dwelling rooms has been by no means universal: hence the introduction of electricity into our houses rather fills a want than forms a rival to gas. Doubtless gas must to a great extent be displaced, but in the great majority of cases it will probably be retained for other purposes than illumination, and electricity will rather supplant oil and candles. Gas, like electricity, as a source of light, is a child of the present century. It has very great advantages of its own; it needs no personal supervision, and is under easy control. It is always ready at our bidding, at any hour of the day or night, to enable us to light up our rooms by the aid of a simple match or any other ordinary means for raising temperature. But the objections to gas are very serious. In the very act of producing light it also produces water, and this water is found of great detriment to delicate objects that are exposed in shop windows. It not only produces much heat itself, but it throws into circulation the heated products of combustion. It also produces various gaseous acids which act injuriously upon gilded ornaments, and the ornamental bindings of our books and picture frames, and which are sadly detrimental to the air we breathe. It hastens the decay of many materials, and its influence on brass is well known in the frequent falling of pictures when they are hung by means of brass wire. Again, its fitfulness or variation is destructive to the eyes, so that constant writing, reading, or studying by its means has proved injurious; in fact, it is questionable whether it has not led more to shortsightedness than any other known cause. It, moreover, introduces into our houses a certain source of danger, taps are left unturned, meters get out of order, gas escapes into our rooms, and when it mixes with air in certain proportions it produces one of the most explosive agencies known, and wrecked houses and lost lives witness to this unfavourable side of the use of gas.

"Now, the great advantages which electricity offers are, first, by the entire absence of any products of combustion it enables us to breathe pure air, and, secondly, by producing a steady light, it enables us to study and read without fatigue; in fact, instances have occurred of those who, using the electric light, have found that they have been able to lay aside their spectacles. On the other hand it must not be forgotten that there are certain objections to the use of electricity. It needs personal supervision, and we all hate personal supervision when it has to be exercised in our own homes. Its economy, compared with the present means of illumination, is still questionable, and though doubtless when electricity can be supplied to our homes, and used as gas is employed now, it may be supplied at no greater cost than gas, nevertheless at the present moment such a supply is not obtainable, and we have to deal with the question as we find it. Moreover, the employment of electricity is not unaccompanied by danger; several lives have already been lost in England, and many more in America, by the careless handling of the conductors that convey the electricity; and its liability, when improperly conducted, to produce heat, and thereby to produce fire, have raised the serious attention of the insurance offices, so much so that the premium paid by the Crystal Palace authorities, owing to the holding of an electrical exhibition there, has been raised to an absurdly exaggerated amount. I hope, however, further on, to show that there need be no danger whatever with electricity, in fact that the dangers attending its installation in houses are considerably less than those attendant on gas. I should be very sorry to say one word against the employment of gas. It has in its day done good service. But I hold that if it be possible to produce in our houses an equally efficient light at a similar cost, no one would hesitate one moment to employ electricity instead of gas. The proper function of gas is not to produce light, it is to produce heat, and the future of gas lies in this direction, not only for cooking and manufacturing purposes, but for the production of power in engines, even though they be employed to generate the electric light.

"It is a curious fact that gas and electricity as illuminant agents were born very nearly about the same time, viz., at the commencement of the present century. It was in the year 1813 that Sir Humphrey Davy discovered the voltaic arc with the aid of a very powerful battery that had been presented to him by the members of the Royal Institution, and with which he made several noted discoveries. He found when he brought together two pieces of carbon and gently separated them, that the electric current was maintained across the air space separating them in a very brilliant flame of fire, which, because it took the form of an arch, was called originally the voltaic arch, or subsequently, the voltaic arc. The voltaic arc remained a scientific curiosity for more than a quarter of a century. Its production was difficult and costly, owing to the necessity for the employment of very large and expensive batteries; but, in 1831, Faraday made his great discovery of magneto-electricity, by which he showed how currents of electricity could be produced by the mere motion of conductors in a magnetic field, and which led to its production in quantities that were previously undreamt of. His brilliant scientific discovery rapidly took a practical form. In the subsequent year, Clarke and Pixii constructed the first magneto-electric machines, which, under the paternal care of Nollet and Holmes, enabled such powerful currents of electricity to be produced, that, in 1857, Faraday was able to recommend the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House to apply his own child to the illumination of the lighthouse on the South Foreland.

"It is only within the present day that electricity as an illuminant can be said to have reached its practical stage. At certain fitful periods considerable excitement has been created in the public mind by certain inventors proposing this much wished for mode of lighting. As far back as 1821 it was mentioned in a book on "Practical Economy" as a probable mode of illumination; but the first patent was not taken out until 1840, by Pinkus. Starr, an American, came over to England in 1845, and proposed the earliest incandescent lamp, the parent in fact of the lamp that has now rendered domestic lighting practicable; and in the year 1846, Mr. W. E. Staite patented the first arc lamp, and made the first public demonstration of electric lighting in Sunderland, in the Hanover Square rooms, and in other places. Mr. Staite was long before his day. He spent much money, and much time, in trying to force upon an unwilling public that which they were not ready to receive, and which indeed was then not in a practical form. It was, however, applied for scenic illumination at the Paris Opera on the production of Meyerbeer's opera "The Prophet," in 1846, by M. Duboscq, who is still to be found in Paris as the electrician attached to the Grand Opera. From this period most of the improvements in the mechanical details and working of the electric light were made in France by Foucault and Serrin, and indeed the Serrin form of arc light remains still that which is best known in our laboratories and wherever the electric light is used for purposes of investigation."

We extract the following from a letter which lately appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette, signed by Mr. C. T. Harris, a member of the Court of Common Council, London:—

"I asked in my place at the Court of Common Council, of the chairman of the Commission of Sewers the cost of the electric lighting in the city (total) against that of gas displaced over the same area. The answer was that in the three districts lighted by electricity, No. 1 (the Brush system) was about the same cost; No. 2 (the Lontin system), twice the cost; No. 3 (the Siemens) system, nearly four times the cost of gas. This calculation entirely ignored the large sums which had been paid down, under the contracts, for works to the various companies. In the Brush contract this was considerably over the amount paid for the mere lighting. I see the great difficulty of estimating what proportion of the amount paid for works should be charged to the one year; but simply to put it out of the calculation altogether must be financially false and dangerously misleading. The contracts for the first year terminated on March 31; that for the Brush Company was £660, or about the 'same price as the commission pays for gas. No other contract was sent in at nearly this exceptionally low price, this being for lighting alone. Of course, gas companies are not paid the expenses of laying down mains, &c. The amount paid for works was, in the words of the contracts, for 'providing and fixing wires, posts, &c., and removing same at expiration of contract.' Now, as to what has happened with the expiry of the year's contracts. No. 1 (Brush) has been renewed at an advance of from £600 to £800, this being considerably above the price paid for gas. No. 2 (Lontin) has not come into operation at all; what lighting has been done in this district having been entirely at the company's own expense. In No. 3 (the Siemens system) the patentees have declined to renew the contract, except at a charge for lighting increased from £2270 to £3600. Overtures have been made to other companies to take over this district, but without success—a very notable fact. The commission declining to pay such a price, the old gas lighting has been resumed over this district since April 1. The result is that the year's lighting has cost (the £1450 paid for works being gone altogether) for electricity over this district £3720, against £612 previously paid for gas, or more than six times the cost of gas. What is desired to be known is the real cost of electric versus gas lighting. The figures I give have not hitherto received publicity. The expense of 'cleaning and keeping in repair the disused gas lamps' has amounted to about £350, or about £115 additional to each district. The contract with gas companies included 'cleaning, lighting, and repairing lamps,' but when the contracts were transferred to the electric companies, the cost fell on the commission, as the gas could not be dispensed with, owing to the many lapses which occur in electric lighting. From these, had it not been for the gas in reserve, whole districts would have been left in darkness for several nights together. This is a material item for consideration in the question of cost of electricity versus gas."

A good story is told of a business meeting amongst certain Quakers about a proposed canal, when one of the most influential men present opposed the project on the ground of its being a speculation. This was, of course, unanswerable: but, among other objections, he went on to say, "When God created the world, if He had wished canals He would have made them." Upon this, "a weighty friend" (one of their terms) rose up and said, slowly, in the intoning voice in which they always speak in meetings, "And Jacob digged a well," and sat down. The influential man immediately retired into private life; but he bought some shares in the canal for all that.

The expedition has been fitted out by Messrs. Emanuel, Durack, and Co., and consists of six men and twenty-two horses, with stores sufficient for six months' maintenance. Messrs. S. P. Emmanuel, M. Durack, and John Pentecost, F.G.S., are members of the party who will be conveyed from Port Darwin on board the schooner Levuka, which has been specially chartered to carry them to Cambridge Gulf, whence their explorations are to begin. Mr. Davidson, superintendent engineer of the A. S. N. Company, received a gratifying ovation from his many friends, previous to his departure by the Austral for London. Mr. George Davidson goes to England, in order to superintend the making of the steamboats now being constructed for the A. S. N. Company. This superintendence is always advisable where large contracts are given out, in order to be assured that materials of superior quality are used in construction. Immediately it was known that Mr. Davidson had taken his passage by the Orient steamer, a committee was hastily formed, and Halstead's fine steamer, the Indignant, was chartered to carry that gentleman to the larger ship, and afford an opportunity to his numerous friends of accompanying him on board to wish him bon voyage. Shortly after leaving the wharf, champagne was opened, and Mr. Norman Selfe called upon the company to charge their glasses, and proposed Mr. George Davidson's health. Mr. G. R. Dibbs then passed a few complimentary remarks, eulogizing Mr. Davidson, who in acknowledging the compliment thanked Mr. Selfe for the complimentary manner in which he had spoken of him, and assured those present that the proceedings would act as a stimulant for increased exertion on his part to retain the confidence and friendship of all who had assembled to do him honour. The Indignant then conducted Mr. Davidson to the Austral, and after steaming round the Pendennis, ship, and singing "Auld Lang Syne," returned to Circular Quay.

The prospectus has been published of the Colorado Silver-mining Company, Limited; capital, £90,000 in 90,000 shares of £1 each, of which 30,000 are offered to the public, the proprietors retaining 60,000 paid up for the value of the mine. The property to be worked is at the Kennedy Silver-mining Field, Queensland. Mr. J. Mullens is the Sydney broker, to whom application is to be made for shares.

We understand that at a meeting held to-day, at Messrs. Hardie and Gorman's offices, the "New South Wales Electric Light and Power Company, Limited" was formed. Sir P. A. Jennings, Messrs. Russell Barton, M.P., John Broomfield, C. T. Gedye, John Pope, J. R. Street, R. Prendergast, and R. S. D. White were nominated for the office of director; the election to take place next week. The capital of the company is £125,000.

The honorary secretary of the Stock Exchange reports that a dividend of 3s. per share has been declared on the No. 1 North Phœnix Company, Gympie.

In the Import markets there was very little business done to-day, and nothing of special interest. In breadstuffs, the trade are buying a little more freely at the lately current quotations. At Messrs. Mort and Co.'s grain sale, wheat realized from 6s. to 6s. 10d. per bushel. Receipts from the country still continue on a limited scale, 176 tons of flour and 6 tons of wheat having been delivered by rail in Sydney for the week ended to-day. New teas are still moving freely at up to 80s. per half chest. Off brands of sardines were placed at 9s. and 4s. 6d., halves and quarters respectively. Coarse salt, to arrive, is in demand at up to 72s. 6d. and 73s., which has been refused, some holders asking 75s.; shipments advised show a considerable falling off. In oilmen's stores we note business in Whybrow's salad oil at 8s. 6d. and 5s. 1d., pints and half-pints respectively; Crosse and Blackwell's pickles were done at 11s. 6d.; Hora's castor oil at 4s.; condensed milk selling at 6s. 6d. to 7s. 9d. D.R.J. candles are held for 7½d. by most houses, but little business transpires; a sale at a shade under this figure is noted. In liquors, large sales of Bull Dog ale, to arrive, have been made, and a fair trade business is reported in other brands. Hennessy's brandy, one star at 54s., and three-star at 46s., has been moved in considerable lines. In metals no changes in value transpired; some lines of White Cross and Ryland's No. 8 fencing wire have been placed at £14 and £14 5s. Soda crystals were done at £6. Cornsacks have been offered under 8s. 6d. On the wharfs prime lucerne hay is selling at £7 10s. to £8, other qualities from £6 to £7; maize, 5s. 2d. to 5s. 3d. per bushel; oats, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 9d.; onions, £4; oaten chaff, £8; potatoes, Warrnambool and New Zealand, £8 15s.; Circular Head, £4 5s. to £4 10s.; butter, 1s. 8d. to 1s. 9d. per lb.; bacon, 6d. to 7d.; cheese, 8d. to 9d.; lard, 7d. to 7½d.; eggs, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 7d. per dozen; wax, 9d. to 11d.; fowls, 3s. to 4s. per pair; ducks, 4s. to 4s. 6d.; geese, 6s. to 8s.; turkeys, 7s. to 12s.; millet brooms, 8s. to 10s. per dozen. Messrs. Tate Brothers report having sold to-day 2320 sacks of feed and seed oats; for best feed samples, 3s. 6d. to 3s. 9d., and 3s. to 3s. 4d. for inferior to good, and up 4s. 0½d. for prime tartarian seed; 174 sacks of blue boiling peas, at 4s. 5d. to 7s. 2d.; 500 bags Victorian onions at £4 per ton; 3400 sacks oaten chaff at 7s. 6d. to 8s. per cwt., and 800 sacks of straw chaff at 5s. 3d. to 5s. 6d.; 750 sacks Tasmanian potatoes at £4 per ton; early rose seed potatoes, £10 5s. per ton, and kidney seed at £8 15s.; Tasmanian straw, 3s. 6d. to 4s. per cwt.; New Zealand flour, £12 10s. to £12 15s.; New Zealand butter at 11d. to 1s. 0½d. per lb., and 20 tubs of Tasmanian ditto at 1s. to 1s. 3½d.

We have frequently drawn attention to the very much more rapid growth of the trade of this colony than that of Victoria. The recent publication of the import and export returns of Victoria is made the occasion by the Australasian Trade Review, published in Melbourne on Monday, of the following comparison between the trade of the two colonies:—

"Imports, 1881: Victoria, £16,718,521; New South Wales, £17,409,326; difference in favour of New South Wales, £690,805; 1870: Victoria, £12,455,757; New South Wales, £7,757,281; difference in favour of Victoria, £4,698,476. Exports, 1881: Victoria, £16,255,103; New South Wales, 16,049,503; difference in favour of Victoria, £202,600; 1870: Victoria, £12,470,014; New South Wales, £7,990,038; difference in favour of Victoria, £4,479,976. The imports of Victoria show an increase of 34·3 per cent. in 1881 as compared with 1870, and those of New South Wales an increase of 124·4 per cent. The exports of Victoria show an increase of 30·3 per cent., and those of New South Wales of 100·8 per cent. But these figures do not fully display the real case, for the greater part of the increase of the Victorian trade is composed of increased receipts of wool from the Riverina district and their re-exports. So far as the current year has gone, the greater growth of the New South Wales trade is proceeding, and to all appearance it will eclipse that of Victoria altogether. The opening of the railway from Sydney to Hay, a town in the heart of Riverina, is significant of a large diversion of trade from Melbourne to Sydney. In our opinion, the best thing that can now happen for Victoria is commercial union with New South Wales, and the sooner that can be effected the better. With the loss of commercial supremacy, Victoria will lose supremacy in nearly every other respect, and her voice, even in Imperial matters, will become second to that of New South Wales."

The following is a return of produce received at Darling Harbour station, per rail, for week ended July 6:—Wheat, 6 tons 1cwt.; flour, 176 tons 12cwt.; pollard, 15 tons 10cwt.; bran, 8 tons; hay, 63 trucks; potatoes, 10 bags; straw, 49 trucks; chaff, 10 bags; butter, 58 kegs, 8 cases; bacon, 6 bags, 45 sides; eggs, 5 cases.

The Customs duties received to-day were as follows:—Spirits, £2438 15s. 8d.; wine (still), £333 19s. 5d.; wine (sparkling), £38 10s.; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), £18 18s.; (in bottle), £54 2s. 3d.; tobacco and snuff, £218; tobacco (unmanufactured), £133 16s.; cigars, £287 11s. 4d.; tea, £286 7s. 6d.; coffee and chicory, £149; sugar (refined), £3 10s. 3d.; sugar (unrefined), £260; rice, £26 1s. 11d.; dried fruits, £190 2s. 8d.; nuts, £4 12s. 3d.; hops, £180 2s. 3d.; specific duty, £670 18s. 3d.; bonding warehouse duty, £76 10s.; Chinese restriction, £60; pilotage, £85 15s.; harbour and light dues, £69 1s.: total, £5576 13s. 9d.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1882.

The position of an Opposition member at the present time is no doubt discouraging. The Government can afford to despise criticism, and in some respects to make it unpleasant for critics. They can do pretty much what they like, and it is not of very much use to find fault. They can disintegrate any dangerous Opposition, and smile at a harmless one. Still, it does not follow from that that strong Governments are bad things per se, or that we should be better off if we had a weak one. When Mr. FORSTER tells the people that they complained of having weak Governments, he says what is strictly true. But there is no reproach in the reminder, even though there may be much fault to be found with the present regime. The reason why weak Governments were complained of was that there was a deadlock in legislation, and the public was pleased with an arrangement which made it possible to get bills through Parliament. It is quite certain that if Sir JOHN ROBERTSON and Sir HENRY PARKES had still been opposed to each other, neither of them would have allowed the other to pass the Education Act, or the Licensing Act. It is true that we do not get everything now that they are both pulling together, or are supposed to be doing so. We have not got the Local Government Act, but we have more chance of it than we should have had if the two duumvirs had been in antagonism. They had the country at their mercy, and on the whole it is better for the country that they should draw their salaries conjointly than alternately.

It is scarcely fair to say that the coalition has been the cause of the deadness of the political feeling in the country. It would perhaps be quite as correct to treat it as the consequence. It was a coalition of politicians and of their hangers on, but not a coalition of parties. The country acquiesced, because the country had no great stake in their rivalries, and only wanted good government. If that result were better secured by their shaking hands than by their shaking fists, the people were contented. If there is a deadness of political feeling in the country we must not blame the great claimants for power and place, but we must go to the great source of political power, which is the people. If the country were intensely animated with political fervour, we should soon see the signs of it in Parliament; but the affections of the country just now are set upon roads and bridges and railways, and the Government, having unusual resources at command, is able to meet the public wish, and is therefore as popular as it is strong. If Mr. FORSTER were in power to-morrow, he could not choose but carry out the same general policy of public improvements. Some old questions that divided the community into parties have been fought out, some new questions that are looming on the horizon have not yet shaped themselves. Just now the country is not very much in earnest about anything, except material improvement.

No doubt there are disadvantages in having a very strong Government in such a state of things, because matters are condoned which would otherwise be sharply censured. Mr. FORSTER is quite right in referring to the Milburn Creek episode as one that was not creditable either to the Government or to the Parliament. It is not too much to say that this affair would have upset almost any previous Government. Sir JOHN in opposition would have declaimed magnificently and triumphantly, and Sir HENRY would have brought irresistible artillery to bear. Whichever Government had been implicated in the offence would have gone down, and the country would at least have had the satisfaction of punishing somebody. As it is, Mr. BAKER has been the solitary scapegoat, and no one can say that his expulsion from Parliament, which, if he had been a more popular man would have been annulled a week afterwards by his constituency, has satisfied the public feeling of equity. A strong Government saved itself, and indirectly saved the delinquents, and by going through a process of metamorphosis came out none the worse for the catastrophe.

But things being as they are, and the present condition of affairs being in fact inevitable, the real protection which the public has against the possible abuses of a strong Government is in being a strong people itself. Public opinion is the real check upon the administration of affairs. Ministers will sneer at the leaders of a weak Opposition in Parliament, but they will not sneer at an expression of public sentiment which they instinctively feel is honest and earnest. It is for the people themselves to study how they are to maintain a pure and healthy tone among themselves. It is only they who can really prevent the spread of corruption in high places. There is always a tendency to degeneracy in prosperous times. Strong Ministries have so much to give away; and when the Treasury is full, and public expenditure is lavish, there are so many pickings. There is some difficulty under such circumstances of keeping public virtue up to the right standard. Mr. FORSTER is right in telling us that "the great nations, both of antiquity and of modern time, had won their foremost positions by honesty, industry, courage, and other virtues." If these virtues die out amongst the people, we cannot expect them to find a last refuge among Governments. But if they survive amongst the people, we shall find that Governments will render them homage. The serious matter for us to consider is that so much of our legislation, and especially our land legislation, has tended to demoralize the people; has made them scramble for the public property, and tempted them to become speculators and gamblers in it, instead of training them to insist on its being handled as a public trust. When a large number of people are made to have personal interest in getting the public property sacrificed, where are we to look for the stern virtue that is to keep the Government straight.

The text of the Repression of Crime Bill, which passed through committee in the House of Commons on Saturday last and in connection with which some extraordinary scenes must have taken place, is now to hand, and very stringent some of its provisions must be confessed to be. It is upon the machinery which this bill will create that the English Government will rely for the putting down of crime in Ireland, and it will interest our readers to know what the provisions of the measure are. The bill is divided into three parts, the first provides for a new method of trying a certain class of offences, the second deals with the offences which the special commission of Judges is to try, and the third with the offenders who are supposed to render such special legislation necessary. The special commission for trying persons charged with such offences as treason, or treason felony, murder, or manslaughter, attempt to kill, aggravated crime against the person, or attacks on dwelling-houses, is to consist of three Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature in Ireland, and the decision of the Judges must be unanimous. A person tried by the Special Commission Court is to be acquitted unless the whole Court concur in his conviction. An appeal from the decision of the Court is to be allowed, the Court of Appeal is to consist of six Judges, and the determination of an appeal is to rest with the majority of the Court. Whether a case is a proper one to be tried by the special Commission or not is to be decided entirely by the LORD-LIEUTENANT. Unless his EXCELLENCY interposes persons charged with the offences named will be tried in the ordinary way. The putting of the machinery of the Act in motion is to be left to the discretion of the chief representative of the Crown. We were told the other day of an amendment to give a joint responsibility to the CHIEF SECRETARY and the LORD-LIEUTENANT. The amendment, however, was not accepted. Under a dilatory LORD-LIEUTENANT the Act would be a dead letter, while in the hands of an alarmist it might be used too often. Nobody, however, anticipates much danger from this part of the bill, and the Judges seem to be about the only persons who seriously object to it. Their objection is natural enough. In passing the measure Parliament is asking Judges to do what juries have proved themselves unable or unwilling to do. As every body knows trial by Judges is to be attempted in Ireland, because in a large number of instances, where agrarian interests were involved, trial by jury has failed. In one particular the Judges can hardly be expected to succeed where the juries have failed. If the proof of guilt is forthcoming the Judges will have the courage to act upon it. But there are two things required in trial by Judges as well as trial by jury, the first is the catching of the guilty parties, and the second the getting of evidence of their guilt. Judges can no more convict without evidence than juries, and under no judicial machinery can criminals be punished unless they are caught. The Irish police have shown themselves capable of a good many things, but they do not seem able to catch criminals.

The second part of the bill facilitates the work of the police by defining the class of persons upon whom they may lay hands. The sphere which the bill provides for the constabulary will certainly prove a large one, and could only be warranted by the desperate condition of the country that is giving so much trouble. Anybody who resorts to intimidation, or incites other people to use intimidation, who takes part in any riot or unlawful assembly, or who is guilty of violence against an ordinary citizen, or against any officer of the law; anybody who belongs to an unlawful association or has anything to do with such an association, who attends a prohibited meeting, or—should he live in a proclaimed district—is away from his usual place of abode at any time an hour after sunset and before sunrise, will be liable to be arrested by a constable and brought before a justice of the peace, who may either discharge the prisoner or bring him before a court of summary jurisdiction. Whether by day or by night, a stranger who is unable to give to a constable a good account of himself will be liable to be brought before a magistrate, and be required to give security that he will keep the peace and be of good behaviour generally for six months. Newspapers containing matter inciting to the commission of treason or to acts of violence are, at the instance of the LORD LIEUTENANT, to be forfeited to her MAJESTY; and the printers or publishers of such newspapers will be called upon to give security to the amount of £200 that they will not publish or print objectionable matter. In the event of a refusal to enter into engagements, the property of the owners of newspapers is to be forfeited, and in that of a violation of engagements the security is to be forfeited. A search for arms, ammunition, papers, documents, instruments, or anything else that may be intended for the use of secret societies, is to be warranted, and any articles of such a description that may be found are to be seized. For the purposes of this provision of the bill, any inspector or sub-inspector of police authorised by warrant may enter any house at any time, and after a reasonable time, if admission is refused, he may execute his warrant by force. The Alien Act is to be revived, and thus the Government will have power to expel dangerous foreigners from the country. Persons who are supposed to be able to supply information are to be bound by recognizances to give evidence, and warrants may be issued for the arrest of absconding witnesses. The LORD LIEUTENANT will be empowered to add to the constabulary of disturbed districts, and may charge a part or the whole of the cost of the increase of the force to the district, or to such a part of the district as may be more directly concerned. Claims for compensation for injuries received in consequence of agrarian crimes are to be investigated by the LORD LIEUTENANT, and the amounts awarded are to be a charge upon the district in such instalments as may be ordered.

These are the chief provisions of the bill which has now passed through the House of Commons, and will probably meet with but little resistance in the House of Lords. The Irish members, of course, passionately dislike it, and have stubbornly resisted its progress. The three provisions of the bill which are so stoutly objected to are those which give the right of search, which empower the police to arrest prowlers, and which attach a punishment to license of speech. It is confessed on all sides that such provisions are almost unprecedentedly severe; but it is contended that they are not more severe than the necessity of the case demands, that they are not intended for law-abiding citizens, and that such citizens have nothing to fear from them; and further, that those who protest against the bill have brought it upon themselves. The question which will be asked by those who have no party ends to serve is, whether the remedy will be sufficient for the evil. It will seem to many that a change of administration is wanted in Ireland quite as much as a change of law. It may be doubted whether, if the Repression Bill had been law two months ago, it would have prevented the Phœnix Park murders; and whether, if the murders had taken place, it would have made the detective police of Dublin a whit more effective than they have proved themselves to be. An honest and a capable police force is of more value to such a country as Ireland than a good many Coercion Acts. The latter indeed will not do very much without the former.

The case of ANDREW HORSLAND, noted in our columns on Wednesday, merits a little further consideration, not by reason of its novelty—such cases are unfortunately too common—nor on account of any peculiar sympathy with the dupe; he pays but a reasonable penalty for his own cupidity. It is the rankness of the offence which requires marking, and the certain indication it affords of the worthless character of its perpetrators. The punishment usually awarded in cases of this sort is far too light; they are only committed by men who live by various forms of fraud, and when sheeted home, should be made the means of ridding the world of an undesirable presence for as long a period as the law will permit. Magistrates should not be beguiled by a respectable exterior or a plausible story in these cases. It is absolutely certain that the men who carry the appliances for games of the sort mean if possible to live by them. They may work on compunction, for credit's sake, or to gain the status requisite for the satisfactory playing of their game; but their lives are barren of any truly honest effort. They work but to gain an opportunity to plunder, and very rarely bring themselves under the power of the law. There are hundreds such in the metropolis, and they are scattered by twos and threes through all the bush towns. They hang about bars and billiard-rooms and mark their victims amongst the crowds. If they were bolder villains they would probably pursue more aggressive modes of crime; if they were richer they would be book-makers, and play for higher game; but their meagre pluck and small capital compels them to keep to their own peculiar walk, wherein at times by a dearth of dupes they suffer much hardship, but, occasionally netting a fool with a good deal of gold and very little brains, contrive to effect a transfer of the former and obtain funds which enable them to wait comfortably for another bite, or to enjoy a period of dissipation in the society of richer or more accomplished knaves. Probably they would be much better off if they followed any honest occupation; and possibly they might be forced into such a course if taught by exemplary punishment that their present path is not only difficult, but leads occasionally to pitfalls from which escape is very difficult indeed. The community would be well served if the meshes of the law could be so narrowed as to take a good many thieves who now escape; for thieves, in whatever fashion they steal, are the natural foes of honest labour; and really it seems a matter of comparatively small significance whether they effect their ends by a matchbox, or a pack of cards, or a burglar's crow-bars, or skeleton keys. All make war on society, and the only great distinction that should be made is between those who are plainly following a profession and those who, from distress or peculiar temptation, may have lapsed into crime. Whatever may be said of the latter, the former merit no mercy, and should find the law with a face of granite when once they are brought to account.

The last meeting of the directors of the Randwick Asylum for Destitute Children seems to indicate that the management of that institution is not so happy as it might be. Dissatisfaction is as evident amongst the employees of the place as disagreement amongst the directors; in fact, the one may be taken as the natural result of the other. The officers of the institution may be perfectly competent and willing to perform all their duties in the most cheerful and earnest spirit; but if they are harassed by a divided and often contradictory command, their position becomes difficult. The old problem of serving two masters faces them, and to escape it the best and most honest of them resign. This is evidently the state of affairs now existing at Randwick, and it must be attributed to the wretched and continuous squabbling of the directors. Sectarian or personal animosity has been freely introduced. The directors have wasted more time in endeavouring to checkmate each other than in transacting the business of the institution. Appointments have been made, not by order of merit, but by the interest or hatred of friends or foes. Officials have left in a peculiar fashion; the medical officer has neglected to attend the meetings of the board; there has been a difficulty with the butcher's contract; bad meat and bad bread are freely spoken of; and the inference is unavoidable that while the directors have quarrelled the institution and the children must have suffered. It is much to be regretted that half a dozen gentlemen, acting in some sense as guardians of a number of orphan children, cannot work together harmoniously, or transact their business with decency and order, and it becomes a matter of serious concern when its inevitable results upon the popularity and use of the institution are reckoned. Public confidence is very easily shaken, and confidence and subscriptions usually go together. Contributions will not be freely made, and public money will be very tardily voted, if it is recognized that in their disbursement personal or sectarian animosities are considered rather than honest public service. Some few people may object to pay for tram tickets for JOHN DAVIES, or for lunches for Mr. PENFOLD; but certainly a very great number will refuse to lift one finger to augment funds which may be used to enable either of those gentlemen to peg one against the other. It would probably be asking impossibilities to beg of the directors to get outside their personal likes and dislikes even for the short space over which a board meeting extends, but they may with all reason be asked to sink them while public business is done; and, if this also is impossible, they may with good cause be asked to make place for better or less quarrelsome men. A study of the records of the Randwick Board meetings will show that the animus of personal or sectarian feuds has far too frequently characterized these gatherings.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE Egyptian question is still embarrassing the European Powers, although, to judge from one part of our cablegrams of this morning, the "beginning of the end" is not far off. The Conference of Ambassadors has, it is authoritatively reported, agreed to formally request the Porte to despatch to Egypt a sufficient number of troops to reduce the recalcitrant Arabi and his officers to submission; but it is not known whether this request will be acceded to. The obstinate procrastination of the Turk is proverbial, and whether he assents or not, the Powers must be well assured that he will, if possible, occasion serious delay. It is nearly two months since England and France each sent three ironclads to Alexandria, and in the meantime other ironclads, together with troops, have been dispatched thither, and there are now no fewer than 29 men-of-war belonging to the European Powers in Egyptian waters. England has 20,000 men in perfect readiness to be sent. The effect has not been to awe Arabi and his troops, who at present are the dominant party in Egypt. He has all along exhibited a stolid indifference to the show of force made by England and France. To the demand of the Admiral of the Fleet, which can only be regarded as an ultimatum, that the fortifications of Alexandria shall forthwith cease, he has paid no heed. He has not even deigned to reply. The situation is, therefore, as our message implies, more critical than ever, and at any moment a salvo from the English Artillery may reverberate across the waters of the Mediterranean, and shot and shell be working the destruction of Alexandria. The British Government is resolved at all hazards to preserve the freedom of the Suez Canal, and Admiral Seymour has officially declared that any attempt to close that waterway will be considered an act of war. The French Government is making every preparation for eventualities. Orders have been given at Toulon for the immediate equipment of a formidable fleet, and for the commissioning of several additional men of war. These warlike preparations on the part of the two Western Powers all indicate that if the sword is once drawn, the insubordinate Arabi and his followers will form the least part of the force to be encountered. For the mutinous Egyptian has not secured the support of the people of his country generally. He has with difficulty increased his battalions, and has succeeded in doing nothing so effectually as in throwing his country into a state of anarchy.

MR. GLADSTONE on Wednesday moved that the House of Commons consider the Arrears of Rent Bill in committee of the whole. The measure proposes that the tenant shall pay rent for the year ending November, 1881, whereupon the State will advance by way of gift a sum equal to one year's rent, provided that that be not more than one-half of the arrears then remaining due. The landlords will have to contribute, or rather forego, the rest of the debt. The Act, however, only applies to holdings not above £30, according to Griffiths's valuation. Mr. Gladstone estimated the amount that would be required from the State at £2,000,000, which is to be drawn from the Irish Church Fund. Either landlord or tenant may apply to put the Act in force, the application to be made to the Land Commission Court. The Premier's motion is being opposed by the Tories; but as the second reading of the bill was agreed to by a considerable majority, it is probable that the Government will again secure a majority.

THE special train from Hay, bringing his Excellency the Governor, together with several members of the Ministry, and a number of ladies and gentlemen, who had taken part in the ceremonies connected with the opening of the railway, arrived in Sydney yesterday afternoon shortly before 5 o'clock. The train, it appears, remained at Hay sufficiently long to enable the guests to be present at the ball on the night of Wednesday.

WITH reference to difficulties that have arisen at Albury and Wodonga, with regard to the conveyance of passengers between the two stations, we understand that the railway departments of the two colonies have entered into arrangements with Messrs. Crawford and Co., whereby the inconvenience of passengers will be obviated in future. The arrangement is that all overland passengers will be carried in the coaches of the abovementioned firm at the rate of 4s. for the return journey, and 3s. 2d. for the single trip. The payment of the amounts named at the stations will ensure the conveyance of passengers and their luggage between the two places.

YESTERDAY Mr. Garvan and Mr. H. Clarke, the members for the electoral district of Eden, waited on the Hon. Minister for Works, to present to him a numerously signed memorial from the residents of Moruya, praying that the works in connection with the breakwater at that place might be continued to completion, so as to remove the bar. They pointed out that the breakwater in its present condition had no effect, whereas a small additional expenditure would be the means of causing a great improvement. Mr. Lackey replied that he would bring the matter under the notice of Mr. Moriarty, the Engineer-in-Chief of Harbours and Rivers, and ascertain what that gentleman would recommend to be done. The same gentlemen then presented a memorial from the inhabitants of the Moruya district, requesting that certain roads in the locality might be attended to. Mr. Lackey promised to refer the matter to Mr. Bennett, the Engineer for Roads.

THE facts connected with the history of the strip of land at the head of Darling Harbour, for which the Government has to negotiate, are noteworthy. The land, it will be remembered, is or was a portion of the Pyrmont estate. A few years ago, when it was found that the accommodation at the Redfern terminus was insufficient, it was discovered that the land in question would be wanted, and it was accordingly negotiated for and handed over to the Government at, it is stated, a valuation of about £100,000. A small portion of that sum only was paid in cash, the rest was to be supplied in the shape of the increased value which the new railway works would give to the private land remaining. The new railway works, however, were not forthcoming, and the original owners of the land complained that they had been hardly dealt with. The Government had bargained to increase the value of the land they retained in return for the land they had parted with, and it had not done so. The outcome of this complaint was that the land, or at least a portion of it, was forfeited by the Government, and that a liberal money compensation went with it. This is the land the Government now finds it cannot do without; and thus, for a piece of ground for which only £10,000 was actually paid but a short time since, some £761,000 has been asked.

WITH regard to a paragraph that appeared in yesterday's issue in reference to the Hon. John Lucas, and the trustees of the National Park, we have been requested to state that no formal resolution was passed requesting Mr. Lucas to resign his position as one of the trustees, but that the matter was discussed, and the meeting adjourned until this (Friday) afternoon, when it will be again taken into consideration.

THE Orient Company's steamship Austral did not leave her moorings until 10.5 a.m. yesterday, clearing the Heads at 10.45. The cause of this delay was, as stated in yesterday's issue, the necessity of discharging coal—some 100 tons—in order to get the vessel in trim for reaching Melbourne. Captain Murdoch hopes to secure the flood tide at Port Phillip, in order to be enabled to float through the shallowest portion of the course en route. In consequence of the unsettled state of affairs in Egypt the Austral will go home by way of the Cape, instead of the Suez Canal.

THE steamer Volmer, which sailed from Sydney for Port Darwin yesterday morning, carried the members of an expedition intending to explore and inspect new country in Western Australia. It is fitted out by Messrs. Emanuel, Durack, and Co., and consists of six men, twenty-two horses, with stores, &c., for a six months' journey. Messrs. S. P. Emanuel, M. Durack, and John Pentecost, F.G.S., are members of the party. All will be conveyed from Port Darwin on board the schooner Levuka, which has been chartered to carry them to Cambridge Gulf, from whence their explorations will commence, the intention being to look for pastoral country, and inspect large areas of country (recently leased by them, and companies formed in Sydney) situated along the route explored by Mr. Alexander Forrest, in 1879. They expect to reach the west coast at King's Sound early in December.

THE effect in Italy of the joint action of England and France in sending fleets to Egypt is described by our correspondent at Rome, whose letter appears in another column. It appears that Italy has strenuously endeavoured to become a participant in Egyptian affairs, on the ground that the number of Italian residents in that country is larger than that of France and England together; but the financial interests of Italy in Egypt are so comparatively small, that up to the present her claim has not been recognized. Some difficulties in the way of the return visit of the Emperor of Austria to King Humbert are pointed out, the place where the host and guest are to meet being an important question, as the Pope might decline to receive the Emperor unless he visited the Vatican before the Quirinal. The Irish question, it would seem, sometimes puts his Holiness in a dilemma.

IN accordance with the suggestion of Mr. De Cartella, Mr. John Wyndham, of Dalwood, has forwarded to the committee of the Bordeaux Wine Exhibition, four octaves and eight dozens of bottles of wines from his vintage of this year. The grapes were gathered in the months of February and March last, and the wines sent consist of two varieties of red hermitage and verdot, the wines in bottle being similar to those in cask. Mr. Wyndham has been unable to send any of his white wines as they are not yet in condition. Mr. Andrew Murray, of Inverell, will also send by the Garonne (s.) four octaves of this season's vintage, consisting of tokay, malbec, hermitage, and madiera; and Mr. Fallon has expressed his intention of forwarding to Bordeaux, through his agents in Melbourne, some of his wines of this year. It is not thought that any other of the winemakers in this colony will send to Bordeaux wines of this year's vintage, but sufficient will have been done to test the practicability of selling such new wines with advantage to the grower.

THE growing taste for art which prevails among the people of this colony has encouraged Messrs. Turner and Henderson, of Hunter-street, to import a very large and choice consignment of engravings, photographs, etchings, photogravures, oleographs, and kindred works, which include not only standard productions, some of which have been known for years to persons of artistic proclivities, but also the latest publications by the art firms of Great Britain, Europe, and America. The collection is so very large that it is impossible to enter fully into its details, but prominent in it are a number of beautiful proof engravings, Miss Thompson's (Mrs. Butler) "Roll Call" (the original of which was painted for the Prince of Wales), "Quatre Bras," and the recently issued "Balaclava;" De Neuville's "Defence of Rorke's Drift; and Edwin Long's "Egyptian Feast." Other engravings are:—"Princess Elizabeth" and "The Princes in the Tower," from Millais's picture; H. S. Marks's "Three Jolly Postboys," and a number of the best works done by the Parisian house of Goupel and Co. The etchings include "Harmony," and the "Gambler's Wife;" while the photographs, plain and coloured, are very numerous. In photogravure, a process practised only by Goupel and Co., which reproduces pictures so exactly that not only the original colouring but the brushwork and the lines of the canvas are imitated, there are several beautiful examples, and the oleographs include some of the best specimens turned out by the firm of Prang and Co., Boston. Mr. Frank Robertson is in charge of the collection, which certainly well repays inspection.

ON Tuesday the committee of the Animals Protection Society held their ordinary monthly meeting, Mr. W. Bradley in the chair. The members present were, Messrs. W. W. Stephen, W. Beaumont, J. R. Street, A. W. Gillies, J. H. Hunt, the secretary (J. Sidney), and inspector (G. Webber). After the usual routine business, the inspector reported the result of his recent visit to Newcastle. The account of the wretched condition of some of the horses, and the inhuman treatment of sheep shipped on board the steamers for Sydney, baffle description. During the few days of his visit he prosecuted eight persons, and obtained convictions in each case. The committee being fully aware of the gross cases of cruelty practised beyond the range they have hitherto acted, have decided to occasionally send their inspector to visit the inland towns. Through the want of funds, the society has been unable to extend its operations in this way before. The summary of the inspector's report for the month is as follows:—Prosecutions, 11; convictions, 11; complaints, 8; cautions, 28; cases investigated, 4; under investigation, 3.

AT a committee meeting of the Drapers' Association, held on Wednesday evening, at the Coffee Tavern, the president stated that suitable rooms had been secured at No. 1, Market-chambers, George-street, and would be open for the use of members on Monday evening next. A conversazione will be held early in the week.

THE usual monthly meeting of the council of the Licensed Victuallers' Association of New South Wales was held on Wednesday evening at the Royal Hyde Park Hotel, the president, Mr. J. B. Olliffe, in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A progress report from the committee appointed to suggest amendments in the Licensing Act of 1882 was brought up and referred back for further consideration. The chairman drew attention to the appointment of Mr. John Davies to the Licensing Bench, as reported in the daily papers. After some discussion the following resolution, moved by Mr. Sharman, and seconded by Mr. Robinson, was carried unanimously:—"That in the opinion of this council the appointment of Mr. John Davies, the leading spirit of teetotalism, to the Licensing Bench is a direct insult to the whole community; nothing that that person has ever done for the public entitling him to such high consideration at the hands of an Administration, whose action in thus rewarding a servile tool deserves the greatest condemnation." The late secretary was then called in, and presented by the president, on behalf of the council, with a handsome gold albert chain, as a slight expression of the esteem in which the members held him during his tenure of that position. The secretary acknowledged the gift in suitable terms, and the meeting closed.

THE Church of England St. Andrew's Schoolhouse was the scene of a very large and pleasant gathering last night, of the teachers of the Sunday-school conducted therein, and of former teachers as well of parishioners generally, in commemoration of the birthday of the Very Rev. the Dean of Sydney, who also occupied the chair. The large hall was elaborately and tastefully ornamented with foliage, flowers, and bunting, and with a variety of mottoes here and there upon the walls. After a brief opening address by the chairman, Mr. Thompson, a Sunday-school teacher of many years' standing in connection with St. Andrew's parish, rose, and in the name of the old teachers, as well as of those still in the work, and the members of the Bible class, in a very appropriate speech, begged the venerable chairman's acceptance of an elegant silver fish-service and of a handsome travelling bag and fittings, as an expression of their high estimation of his general worth and services, and of the exceeding kindness which has ever marked his intercourse with them for many years past, and of their hope and prayer that that intercourse may be continued yet many years more. The Dean in feeling terms acknowledged the kindness which had prompted so unexpected a manifestation, and reciprocated the affectionate regard to which Mr. Thompson on their behalf had given utterance. The meeting was addressed also by the Rev. J. D. Langley, Mr. A. Gordon, Mr. Kent, the Rev. Mr. Sturdee, and the Rev. Mr. O'Reilly—each speech being succeeded by an anthem, very beautifully rendered by the choir, under the direction of Mr. Gullick, Mr. Noble presiding at the organ. A vote of thanks to the committee who had arranged and carried out the meeting, and to the choir, having been unanimously adopted, the Dean pronounced the Benediction.

THE Broughton Scholarship at King's School, Parramatta, has just been won by Hedley Heber Hungerford, the son of the Rev. S. Hungerford, Incumbent of Enfield. The scholarship was founded in memory of the late Bishop Broughton, and is worth £25 per annum while the holder remains in connection with the school.

A VERY interesting lecture on Scientific Agriculture, a report of which will be found elsewhere, was last night delivered by Mr. Squire W. Pye in the Technical College, the Hon. J. M'Intosh occupying the chair, and there being a fairly large attendance.

WE have to acknowledge receipt of a pamphlet on "Trained Nursing," a paper read at the late Victorian Social Science Congress, by F. G. Holden; the Regulations of the Grand Intercolonial Juvenile Industrial Exhibition, to be opened at the Garden Palace on 9th November; Messrs. Anthony Hordern and Sons' "Palace Emporium Advertiser," containing complete time tables for all lines of rail and cab, with other information; the Geelong Grammar School Quarterly, a paper devoted, as its name may indicate, to educational and athletic matters; and the Seventh Report of the Infants' Home at Ashfield, for the 18 months ending 31st December, 1881.

AT the Water Police Court yesterday, a case of an extraordinary kind was brought to a termination. Two men named Albert Hyman and James Cook were brought up on a charge of stealing files, screws, and tacks, value £20, the property of Eliza Tinsley. The evidence adduced showed that the prosecutors, Charles Theophilus Tinsley and Frank Evers, carry on a hardware business at premises between Pitt-street and Charlotte-place, under the name and style of Eliza Tinsley. They had in their employment a clerk named Charles Hibble, aged 15 years and 6 months. Between five and six months ago this boy was introduced to Hyman, who carries on the business of a tobacconist, &c., at Newtown, and from that time until a fortnight ago he was in the habit of visiting Hyman's place daily. The evidence for the prosecution showed that Hyman tempted this boy to play cards until he was in his (Hyman's) debt, and then in order to clear off the debt induced him to steal samples of goods stated in the information and give them to him (Hyman) in payment thereof. After the debt had been cleared off Hyman threatened Hibble that unless he got him some more goods from the store he would expose him, and the boy, dreading this, apparently did whatever Hyman wanted him to do. He admitted that he had himself stolen over £100 worth of goods; but as the value of the whole of the goods taken is stated by the manager, Mr. Charles Tindale, to be over £200, it is believed that Hyman got a duplicate key, having, it is supposed, obtained an impression from the one always carried by Hibble, and went into the place and helped himself. Hyman and Cook sold the goods to several of the leading ironmongers in the city, besides others in the suburbs. Hibble, who received an excellent character from Mr. Tindale, pleaded guilty to stealing a cask of files, and also confessed to the whole of the transactions between himself and the prisoners. Mr. Buchanan, S.M., who heard the case, commented in severe terms upon the "fiendish conduct" of Hyman, and committed both prisoners for trial. Cook was admitted to bail, himself in £150, and two sureties of £100 each. An application for bail for Hyman was refused.

A MAGISTERIAL inquiry was yesterday afternoon held in the Darling Hotel, Harbour-street, by the acting city coroner, Mr. W. T. Pinhey, J.P., into the cause of the death of Margaret Long, aged about 46 years, who died on Wednesday, under circumstances which it was thought warranted an inquiry. The medical testimony given was to the effect that deceased had died from the rupture of an abscess on the liver, no doubt accelerated by habits of intemperance. A finding was returned in accordance with this testimony.

AT 20 minutes past 7 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the residence of Mr. J. C. Sommers, a fruiterer in Liverpool-street, the origin of the fire apparently being the overheating of the stove chimney in the diningroom. The iron chimney of the stove, which was a portable one, becoming overheated, set fire to a partition and the woodwork of the ceiling. The flames then burst through the roof, the result being the destruction of a portion of it. The interior of the room was wholly destroyed. The engine of the No. 3 Brigade was first at the fire, but the flames were extinguished by the manual engine of the Insurance Brigade, the members of the No. 3 and City brigades rendering such assistance as lay in their power. It is not known whether the building—which is the property of Sir D. Cooper, and is leased to Mr. Clarkson, of Market-street—is insured or not, but there is no insurance on its contents.

ON the last trip of the steamer Hilda, on the passage from Sydney to Coal Cliff, the master, Henry Walbrook, reports that on the 5th instant, when of Stawell Point, James Farrell, the cook, jumped overboard, and was drowned. When on that day he was called to his duties, he went on deck, and was shortly afterwards seen by the chief officer, and others to jump overboard. The steamer was at the time at full speed, but immediately the helm was altered, the steamer slewed round, the engine stopped, a boat lowered, and diligent search was made for three-quarters of an hour, but without success. On the return passage a boat was also lowered, and search again made, but without any result.

WHAT appears to have been an accident, and which resulted in a passenger being drowned, occurred on board the s.s. Alathea, on its 6.30 trip from Watson's Bay yesterday evening. James Connor, master of the vessel, last night reported to the Water Police, that at about 7 o'clock, on the passage from Watson's Bay to Circular Quay, and when off Shark Point, a passenger named Walton accidentally fell overboard and was drowned. Walton, it is stated, had been standing with his back to, or leaning with his face outwards, against the forward gangway rails, when he suddenly fell into the water, carrying the gangway rails with him. The man was seen clinging to the gangway rails in the water, and immediately the steamer was stopped and a boat was lowered. By the time this was done, however, the man had disappeared from sight, and though the boat remained in the vicinity for some twenty minutes, he did not reappear. He was a carpenter by trade, and was returning to Sydney from a visit to Watson's Bay.

ALEXANDER BURNER, aged about 15 years, working at Cameron's Tobacco Factory, was yesterday received into the hospital, having sustained serious injury—it is believed from the symptoms exhibited, fracture to the base of his skull—by falling through an aperture from the top to the bottom floor of the factory.

IN alluding to a letter from Mr. John Pender, chairman of the Eastern Extension of the Australian and China Telegraph Company, as to the delay in the transmission of messages from Europe to these colonies, the Argus says:—"In explaining how the cable service is managed, Mr. Pender points out that there are two principal routes for cable messages, one via Suez and one via Teheran, which are used by the Extension Company and the Indo-European Company in common, and whichever line is working best is chosen for the transmission of messages. It is optional, of course, for the press and the public to direct their messages to be sent by either route, and they should have for their guidance whatever information is procurable as to which is the better route of the two. A ready way of acquiring this information would be to take note of the time occupied by the telegrams in transmission, but this is rendered impossible, because, in the first place, of the errors made in recording the time at which messages are despatched from London, and, in the second, because the route by which the messages come is not marked on the telegrams. We believe that the regulations of the service provide for identification of route; but as far as this end of the line is concerned, the telegrams furnish no evidence as to the way by which they come. It may fairly be asked that instructions should be given to remedy this defect. Again, persons who receive telegrams in Melbourne, Sydney, or Adelaide have no means of knowing whether their messages have left London late or early as compared with other telegrams. At Bombay and other Indian stations this information is supplied by a daily return giving the date and hour of the latest message transmitted from London. No such information is given in Australia, but if it could be obtained it would be exceedingly useful. The points to which we have referred are deserving of the attention of the company. The chairman has expressed a desire to make the service acceptable in every way, and we may hope, therefore, that the improvements asked for will not be refused."

TWO-THIRDS of the crime of the country (says the London Times of May 19) has been traced to the abuse of intoxicating drinks. If this is a correct view, or anything like a correct view, the seller of intoxicating drinks can hardly be the useful public servant he takes pleasure in representing himself. He can ask, at most, to be tolerated, and his appeal for even this measure of grace must be clearly and convincingly made out. This, we believe, it can be. The public-house system is a monstrous evil, but it is a less evil by far than would follow from a consistent attempt to put it down. The attempt, in the first place, is not likely to be successful. The demand for drink will create the supply. The passion where it exists is far too strong to be amenable to repressive rules. If it is denied in one place it will find its satisfaction somewhere else. The licensed victuallers have experience on their side thus far. They know well that restrictions which are applied to licensed houses do not admit of being so extended as to meet the whole case. Their petition for fair play is, therefore, reasonable upon the face of it. If temperance advocates really mean to declare war upon the liquor traffic they must go beyond anything they have as yet ventured to propose. Instead of striking at a symptom they must set about their work in a root-and-branch way. They must deal with the origin of the mischief, with the importers and producers of intoxicating drink, and not only with a section of the retail sellers. The licensed victualler may urge, with some reason, that he is not fairly treated. He has been picked out from the class to which he belongs, and has been set up as a mark against which all shots are to be directed. It is his popularity which is thus fatal to him. If he were less in favour with one part of his fellow-countrymen, he would be less exposed to the righteous indignation of another part. The best defence he can make for himself is that, nuisance or not, he is irrepressible. If he is put down in one shape, he will rise up in another at least as mischievous as the former one. As well attempt to legislate against a miasma and to leave undrained the pestilential source from which it springs.

BAKER PASHA (writes the military correspondent of the Times of India) and the other English officers employed by the Sultan were said to be dismissed for ever; but it is now stated that their services are to be continued for a further period of six months. It is, however, certain that the Sultan has placed himself in the hands of the Germans as instructors for his army. He could not do better; and as Germany has more to lose than England by an extension of Russian power to Constantinople, the event is satisfactory to us at home. The German Government has been questioned on the subject, and quotes the precedent of Count Von Moltke, who was sent to advise the Sultan on the reorganization of the Turkish army after the Russo-Turkish war in the early part of this century, when Diebitch nearly broke up the power of the Porte by his advance on Constantinople. Prussia was then a small Power, living by favour of Russia, yet the officer who was to become her great captain then assisted the Turks. Why not, therefore, do the same now?

A CONTEMPORARY observes:—"The Salvation Army must have obtained a strong footing in England when the Upper House of Convocation decides to appoint a committee of bishops to ascertain its tenets and practices with a view to its being attached to the Church of England. In the debate the Bishop of Winchester, one of the most eminent of the English prelates, said the proceedings of the army might have been somewhat extravagant, but they had induced a remarkable degree of sobriety among people whom they influenced, 'abstention from smoking even having been obtained.' That showed their very great influence. Some members of the army had been most cruelly treated, but they had not shown themselves exasperated, and had afterwards prayed earnestly for their persecutors. These things showed, he thought, that although they might not be able to adopt all the principles of this army, they should certainly not turn a cold shoulder to them."

A TURKISH native paper, the Vakit, thus ridicules England:—"A discussion has been taking place, both in England and France, as to whether the English or French fleet is the better of the two, and proofs and arguments have been brought forward on both sides by those acquainted with the subject. It being a very difficult thing to decide which of two such perfect fleets as the English and French is superior, we do not venture to give our opinion. It is said that the big French ironclads are superior in number to the English; but it is alleged that the small ironclad English vessels are superior, both as regards numbers, their construction, and their suitability for war purposes. However this may be, we notice that as the necessary works for the construction of the tunnel progress, such discussions as these increase. A number of sensible men are now meditating on the objections to the opening of the said tunnel. The English lately have been getting more and more violent. Yesterday they were excited about the tunnel, now they are excited about the fleet—to-morrow, who knows what they may be violent about? However we must not be astonished at their violence and vehement speeches. The existence of different political parties naturally leads to these wise displays."

REFERRING to the murders in Phœnix Park, the London World observes:—"The resources of civilization have been pitted against the resources of the secret societies, and thus far the former have been ignominiously worsted in the contest. The Irish, if a thriftless, are a money-loving race; but, in this particular instance, the promise of money has proved wholly ineffectual. From these facts there are certain obvious and most unwelcome conclusions that must be drawn. The influence of Fenianism, Ribbonism, or of the American-Irish organization generally, is predominant in the country. The popular hatred of the English connection is so strong that butchery of the foulest kind excites, not indignation, but sympathy. So far as Ireland has any public opinion at all, that opinion is on the side of murder and outrage. Until the men who committed the deed of the 6th May are surrendered to justice, this is the damning charge to which Ireland will be exposed. If the men who are now sheltering the assassins and their accomplices were not convinced that popular feeling was with them, they would have betrayed the abominable trust before this. There is another inference which the circumstances not so much warrant as compel. Either Messrs. Parnell, Davitt, and Co. are insincere in their denunciation of crime, or their authority over the Irish people is gone. It is inconceivable, and wholly abhorrent to common sense, that if the chiefs of the Land League were as powerful as it is assumed they are in Ireland, and were as averse as they profess to be to the tactics of the bowie-knife, they would not have been able long ere this to capture the assassins. If they have the power to do so—which, ex hypothesi they have—they must lack the will; if they possess the will—and from their own protestations we are bound to believe that they do—they must manifestly be without the power."

THEY have a wholesale way of committing frauds in the States (observes an English paper) which, if not always to be admired, is usually astounding enough. Recent American papers bring us, for example, a story of how an insurance company called the "Universal" "gobbled up" five other companies and brought them all to bankruptcy. This is how the receiver sets forth the deeds of this remarkable company:—"There was," he said, "a system of wrecking insurance companies at that time that was a marvel of fraudulent manipulation—a solvent company was transferred to an insolvent company. In 1871 the Widows and Orphans' was taken in by sale and insurance in whole by the Reserve Mutual. In March, 1874, both companies were absorbed by the Guardian Mutual; and in October, 1874, all three, along with the New York State Life and North America, were swallowed up in the Universal. When the North America found itself insolvent an offer was made by Mr. Furber, of the Universal, to make the North America good if the directors would resign. They did resign, and Mr. Furber became president of the North America while still controlling the Universal, and other officers of the Universal became also officers of the North America—the offices of all the companies being in the one building; and there was, in fact, none but a mere formal distinction in the management. The companies had 9710 policies at the date of the final bankruptcy, and instead of 10,000,000 dollars of assets they had only 1,567,400 dollars, mostly in the hands of the Superintendent of Insurance. All witness received when he took charge was 100,000 dollars in assets. There was 50,000 dollars in bonds and mortgages deposited with Drexel and Morgan, as agents for J. S. Morgan, of London, the deposit being made for the purpose of creating a credit in England, where the company had policy holders. The deposit is now in litigation, and the expense of litigating so far has been about 15,000 dollars."

THE report of the meeting held at the Masonic Hall, Balranald, relative to connecting that district with the metropolis by rail, was abridged from the Riverine Recorder.

WE have been requested to remind poultry, pigeon, and canary fanciers that to-morrow (Saturday), at 5 p.m., is the latest hour that entries can be received for the annual show of the New South Wales Poultry, Pigeon, and Canary Society, to be held at the Temperance Hall on the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd August.

THE ARREARS OF RENTS IN IRELAND BILL.

LONDON, JULY 5.

In the House of Commons to-day Mr. Gladstone moved that the House go into committee to consider the measure dealing with arrears of rents in Ireland; but the Tories are opposing the motion. The bill in question provides for the payment by the State of a portion of the arrears due by tenants, such payment to be taken out of the surplus funds of the Irish Church. It was read a second time on May 23, when the Government obtained a majority of 112 votes in a full House.

THE EGYPTIAN CRISIS.

[BY CABLE.]
(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

LONDON, JULY 5.

In the House of Commons, this evening, Sir Charles Dilke, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, stated, in reply to a question, that Admiral Seymour had received fresh instructions from his Government that he might be enabled to meet every contingency which might arise in connection with the present crisis in Egypt, with a view of warlike preparations being carried on by the Egyptians; and their evident intention in case of necessity, to impede the navigation of the Suez Canal. Admiral Seymour has officially declared that the sinking of ships at the entrance of the harbour would be considered an act of war.

JULY 6.

The latest news from Egypt is of a very disquieting character. No reply has been returned by Arabi Bey or by those associated with him to the peremptory demand made by the British Admiral that the work of fortifying the harbour of Alexandria should immediately cease. Meanwhile the Egyptians show no sign of yielding to the demand of Admiral Seymour. The situation is consequently regarded as most critical now. It is fully expected that the squadron, acting under orders from home, will shortly commence the bombardment of the city.

PARIS, JULY 6.

There is great activity at Toulon, in consequence of the receipt of orders for the equipment of a formidable fleet. Several additional men-of-war are to be commissioned, and every preparation is being made for all possible eventualities.

BOMBAY, JULY 6.

The greatest activity prevails here, in consequence of military preparations being made for the prompt despatch to Egypt of the native and British-Indian contingent, asked by the Home Government. Every arrangement is being made for the transport and victualling of the troops. Should necessity arise, a force of 6000 fully equipped can set sail at the shortest notice.

CONSTANTINOPLE, JULY 6.

It was authoritatively announced to-day that the Ambassadors of the Powers assembled in conference had agreed to formally request the Porte to despatch a sufficient force of Turkish troops to Egypt to ensure the submission of Arabi Pasha and the leaders of the national party to the orders of the Khedive. It is not yet known whether the Sultan will accede to the proposal of the Powers.

MELBOURNE, THURSDAY.

At the City Police Court this morning Senior-constable Nixon and Constable Burton were charged with wilful and corrupt perjury, alleged to have been committed during the hearing of a charge of assault brought by them against a wine and spirit merchant named Maximilian Dinon. A customs officer seized a quantity of watches and jewellery from Captain Donaldson, of the steamer Cheviot, from Sydney yesterday. The officer's reason was that Donaldson, who denied having such property on board, intended to smuggle it ashore. The captain, through his solicitor, Mr. Gaunson, appealed to the Commissioner of Customs against the seizure. Mr. Graves heard the case this morning. He was not satisfied with the evidence brought for the captain, and considered the case substantiated, and therefore decided to forfeit the goods seized, and fine the captain three times the value. If that decision should not be approved of, Mr. Graves will be willing that the case shall be tried by a competent Court of Jurisdiction. Mr. Graves has given Donaldson four hours to decide whether to pay the fine or take the case to court, and the Cheviot will not be allowed to clear out until he has made his decision.

Another application is to be made on the 19th instant, at Carcoar, for a license for a house opposite the railway station, for which a license was recently refused by the Bench on the grounds that another hotel was not required, and that from its close proximity to the railway station it would be a nuisance to the residents and a source of temptation to the railway officials. This application will be objected to on the same grounds.

THE BOREHOLE COLLIERY STRIKE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

NEWCASTLE, Thursday.

The Borehole Strike Arbitration Board resumed their sitting to-day at 10 o'clock, and adjourned to the colliery at noon, and proceeded to view the coal sections. In accordance with basis agreed on yesterday regarding the proposal for an immediate resumption of work, the miners' representatives stated to-day that the matter would be considered at a meeting of the men to-morrow; they were scarcely in favour of the suggestion, as they considered that an acceptance of the district price pending the award would look too much like a compromise on their part. The proposal made is that if the men go to work now, they shall be paid the district price, and such further sum subsequently as the arbitration award may settle.

PARLIAMENT OF VICTORIA.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

In the Legislative Assembly to-day a good deal of warmth was exhibited in connection with a question raised by Mr. Harper as to whether ballast used on the Mordialloc line, passed by Mr. Ford, Engineer of Construction, but subsequently condemned by the Engineer-in-Chief, had been taken, and the land sold by Mr. Ford to Messrs. Falkingham and Bunn, the contractors for the line. Mr. Harper whilst speaking was subjected to constant interruptions by Messrs. Woods and Longmore. Mr. Bent regretted that such a question had been placed on the notice paper. If it were not for the respect due to Mr. Harper in his representative capacity, he would decline to answer the question. He made an explanation, from which it appeared that Mr. Ford bought land some years ago, placed it in the hands of an agent for sale, who disposed of it to the contractors; but no ballast from this land was used while Mr. Ford was Engineer-in-Chief. He thought that Mr. Ford had been treated in a most cowardly manner. The House then went into Committee of Ways and Means. The debate on the tobacco duty was resumed by Mr. Dow, who having spoken, Mr. Nimmo proceeded to address the committee, when Mr. Mason rose to a point of order, urging that Mr. Mirams had been unfairly ignored, as having moved that progress be reported on the previous night, and that Mr. Mirams was entitled to precedence in speaking. The Chairman ruled that it was merely a question of practice. Mr. Mirams protested against a member being purposely insulted by the chair. A long and animated discussion ensued as to whether Mr. Mirams should be required to withdraw the expression, in the course of which Mr. Mason supported the member for Collingwood. Mr. Patterson expressed an opinion that Mr. Mason was the chief offender. The latter retorted that he was not going to be lectured by the leader of the Orange gang, a butcher boy, or cattle duffer. Ultimately, at the instance of Mr. Gillies, Mr. Mirams withdrew his claim. The debate was continued the whole evening the House not rising until after midnight; finally the motion for the re-imposition of the tobacco duty was carried on division by 28 to 12. In the course of the discussion Mr. Mirams, who occupies the position of chairman of the Tariff Commission, expressed his belief that the Commission would be able, while preserving the principle of protection, to make proposals towards intercolonial free trade.

PARLIAMENT OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Thursday.

In the Legislative Assembly to-day a petition was presented from the council of the Rifle Volunteer Force, asking for legislative direction and inquiry into the differences existing between themselves and the inspecting officer of volunteers, touching their relative functions under the Rifle Companies Acts. The construction of the overway bridge at Morphett-street, over the dangerous railway crossing, at a cost of about £40,000, is to be begun forthwith. The Attorney-General moved the second reading of the bill to enable accused persons to give evidence on oath. The debate was adjourned. The bill provides that accused may at their option give evidence on their own behalf, but subject to cross-examination, and that they are not compelled to commit themselves; and if they prefer not to give evidence, the fact of such preference is not to be used against them. The Indian Immigration Bill passed the third reading, having undergone no important alteration. The debate on the second reading of the Crown Lands Bill was resumed, and further adjourned. The speeches delivered were mostly of the same tone as previously. They admit that land law reform is urgently necessary, but disagree with the Government proposals, and each suggest diverse amendments. The discussion will probably last for some time yet. The Electoral Bill, which has passed the Legislative Council, went through its second reading, and committee, without material alteration. Mr. Tomkinson has moved for the production of all papers relating to the pardon of Thomas King, convicted of criminal assault, and whose case is exciting great interest in the place where the crime is alleged to have been committed.

ARCHIBALD FORBES on the EGYPTIAN CRISIS.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The Athenæum was again crowded this evening on the occasion of Mr. Forbes' third lecture of the second series, the subject being "The Armies of Europe." Whilst speaking of the impossibility of employing native Indian soldiers in European warfare, Mr. Forbes said, "But Egypt is not in Europe, and judging by the remarkable alacrity with which an Egyptian division serving with the Turkish army ran away in one of the battles in the Russo-Turkish war, I would back a brigade of little Gourkas to thrash soundly the whole array that Arabi Pasha could bring into the field." Referring afterwards to Great Britain's interference in Continental politics, by reason of the disproportionate weakness of her army, he said:—"But the maintenance of the Suez Canal invokes no interference with European or foreign affairs, but is the simple duty which the British Empire owes to herself. There was once a steadfast old gentleman of the name of Palmerston. If he could be spared from the other world for about a week he would settle the Egyptian difficulty with neatness and promptitude."

RAILWAY EXTENSION IN THE NEW ENGLAND DISTRICT.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our own Correspondent.)

INVERELL, Thursday.

The largest, most influential, and unanimous meeting ever held in Inverell, took place this afternoon, in the Masonic Hall. Mr. R. L. Murray, M.P., four delegates from Glen Innes, and residents from all parts of the district attended. The first resolution was moved by Mr. Mayne, seconded by Mr. Gibson, and supported by Messrs. Burridge (Glen Innes), Mr. Murray, M.P., and others, as follows:—"That in the interests of this colony it is necessary at once to construct a line of railway from Grafton to the inexhaustibly rich agricultural, pastoral, and mining lands stretching from Glen Innes, Inverell, and thence westward." It was next moved by Mr. G. Woods, seconded by Mr. W. Gihome,—"That a petition adopted and presented to Parliament, embodying the following facts:—That the line—to be of any benefit to Inverell district—must come direct from Glen Innes, and any deviation north to Tenterfield or south to Armidale would be opposed to our best interests, as by recent trial surveys a line via Glen Innes would be under 140 miles, whilst via Tenterfield would be about 220; that this district could more than supply the requirements of this colony in breadstuffs, as one million acres of magnificent, rich lands could be laid under cultivation; that the portion under wheat for years past yielded an average of 20 bushels. The line would tap the great tin mines, which produced last year 6500 tons of ore, valued in Sydney at £400,000. Hence the urgent necessity of at once constructing the section from Glen Innes to Inverell." The resolutions were unanimously carried, and the petition was signed by all present. Thanks to the delegates and to the Mayor for presiding closed a most harmonious meeting. Mr. Murray, M.P., arrived last night, and was cordially received. He addressed the electors to-night.

THE CUSTOMS RETURNS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I must beg your indulgence for some remarks on your notice of my letter in yesterday's Herald. If the over importation which has unquestionably occurred is the result of an attempt to break down the ring among the London shipping brokers, it will soon cease. If the goods are re-exported to Queensland and the Islands they will be shown among the exports, and thus tend to balance the account.

If, then, goods are imported and not re-exported, they must either be stored or go into consumption. The imports are coming in now as fast as ever, consequently we may presume they are actually going into consumption. As you say, employment is abundant and wages high; but the funds from which those wages are paid are not so readily discoverable. Our production of wealth is by no means commensurate with our consumption. The returns of exports are out of all proportion to the imports, and the balance is made up by the proceeds of land sales. Without the land revenue employment would cease, and then where would be our prosperity? I am, &c.,

HAY, Thursday.

The tenth annual show of the Hay Pastoral Association was opened to-day. After the successful ball of Wednesday evening the visitors and residents were rather late in taking part in the show; in fact, very little was done in the show ground before 12, and what was accomplished after that was not of a very interesting character. The Hay Association, like many other pastoral associations of the south, is a little behind the times. The show ground, which is on the border of the town, is large, but, from the fact that its only improvements consist of an ordinary fence and a plain-looking sheep shed, strangers might easily pass it, and never dream that it was used for show purposes. The show was a very poor one in every respect. Some say this was caused by the season's dryness, but I think the lack of energy on the part of the townspeople can bear the largest share of the blame. There seems to be an utter want of knowledge regarding the way shows should be managed. Entries were received in an irregular fashion up to the last moment, consequently everything is bustled, and the forenoon of the show day finds the secretary completely blocked. The exhibits are not brought to ground until a late hour, so the judges cannot commence their work. In the case of the present show, the work of judging was not completed until the show had closed. The schedule only comprised prizes for cattle, sheep, and horses. There were no cattle and very few horses. The sheep shed, which is not very large, was half filled with animals of very good quality, but it was not a sheep show one might expect from such a good pastoral district as Hay. The prize list indicates plainly that a couple of firms take the lion's share of the prizes, in fact, there was little competition. The prize sheep are of the true Riverine stamp, having fleece of great length, showing brightness, but no great density. Some excellent sheep of the Mudgee breed, purchases from Rouse and G. H. Cox, which were exhibited by Devlin Brothers' did not receive even a commendation. With other judges, say in the west, the verdict would not have been so unfavourable. Messrs. Robertson's sheep were in first-class condition, and undoubtedly are the outcome of artful breeding. There were no long-woolled sheep on the ground, and but very few fat sheep. In the horse section there were but three draught horses, a like number of bloods, but there were six buggy pairs, ten hackneys, two single buggy horses, four four-in-hand teams, and five hunters. The first prize draught horse is one of the best I have met with in the Riverina. The blood horses are not of great quality. The harness horses were decidedly the most attractive feature. The sheep judges were Messrs. P. M'Farland and R. W. Franks, and Messrs. John Leitch and John Pearson were judges of the horses.

The awards went as follows:—

Horses.—A. M'Donald's Jack of Haddo, 1st; J. Parr's Young Conqueror, 2nd. Mare of the draught breed—R. Mayre's, 1st; J. Jones's bay, 2nd. Thoroughbred Bloods: Horse—A. MINING INTELLIGENCE.

(From our own Correspondents.)

ALBURY, Thursday.

The shareholders in the Black Range Alluvial Gold-mining Company held a meeting last night, and decided to place 3000 reserved shares on the Melbourne market, for the purpose of placing suitable machinery on the ground.

COPELAND, Thursday.

Splendid gold was struck in No. 2 South Centennial at a depth of 220 feet in the underlay.

CARCOAR, Thursday.

The Queen of the Mount is still crushing at the King of the West battery. They have already 465oz. of amalgam lodged in the bank, and have now 20 head of stampers operating on stone. They have carted 276 tons to the machine. A new reef has been discovered in the claim in West Balmoral. In the Balmoral Gold-mining Company's cleaning up at the battery, 88 tons yielded 51oz. 16dwt. 7gr. of retorted gold. The King of the West claim, new reef, is now down 12 feet, and anticipated to yield 10dwt. to the ton. They have already about 140 tons at grass.

The mining manager of the Nymagee Copper-mining Company, Limited, reports on June 29 as follows:—"Barton shaft has been sunk a further depth of 8 feet, making a total of 86 feet below the 40-fathom level, or 286 feet from surface, at which depth we cut water, as previously reported, and which has since risen 53 feet. This, however, is apparently the water level, as it has not risen during the last two days. I have lengthened the flat rope, and expect to bail the water out during the coming week; but I am of an opinion I shall not be able to sink much deeper without the assistance of pumps, as the present supply is likely to require the use of the winding-engine continually, which would prevent any other work being done. This, however, I shall prove in a few weeks. 40-fathom Level: The north end has been extended a further distance of 14 feet, making in all 215 feet from shaft. The sulphuret ore passed through here up to date is very good, but in the present end it is not quite so rich. I think, however, that it is only a poor layer, similar to one passed through recently. 20-fathom Level: The winze north of Barton's shaft, in section 11, has been sunk a further depth of 11 feet 6 inches, making in all 67 feet below the level. The lode here is very hard, but improving in quality as the winze gets deeper. Harcourt's Shaft: The stope south in the 20-fathom level is still producing good ore, and extending south in section 11 as previously reported. Pope's Shaft: The south end in the 40-fathom level has been driven a further distance of 12 feet 6 inches, making in all 177 feet 6 inches from shaft. This end is in a splendid sulphuret lode, which I believe is worth fully 15 per cent. The stope north in the 70-feet level is still yielding good ore, and the lode getting much thicker. I discovered some good gray ore in section 14, about 76 feet from surface, and which is just immediately over the south-end 40-fathom level, Pope's Shaft. The ore where cut through is about 8 feet wide, and I am driving a cross cut from the 20-fathom level, which is 37 feet deeper, and expect to cut the ore in a week from date, should it continue down. I may add that this ore is altogether west of any carbonate ore raised hitherto. The prospecting shaft in section 4 has been sunk a further depth of 18 feet, making in all 99 feet from surface. This shaft has been sunk in the western side of the lode, through iron ore the whole distance, and I am now driving to ascertain its width, and if there is any copper ore against the other wall. Refinery: The copper refined during the month is really splendid, but I was obliged to stop the refining this morning to work-up some of the pimple metal on hand. Ore raised for month, 394 tons. The weather continues favourable."

INTERCOLONIAL FOOTBALL MATCHES.

The members of the Geelong Football Club of Victoria who are to take part in the football contests against the Sydney clubs playing under the auspices of the New South Wales Football Association, arrived in town this morning by the 7 a.m. train. They were met at the Redfern railway station by a large number of members of the association, and driven to Rainford's Cambridge Club Hotel, Oxford-street, where quarters had been secured for them. Champagne was called for and the health of the "Geelong Football Team" proposed by Mr. W. C. Marshall, in suitable terms. Mr. George Steedman, manager for the Geelong team responded in a very happy manner, and expressed a hope that the game of football, as played under the rules of the New South Wales Association, would benefit by the forthcoming matches. He thanked the association very much for the manner in which the health of the team had been drunk. The Geelong team will be selected from the following players:—Messrs. J. Brush, C. Brownlow, D. Curdie, A. Collins, F. M. Douglass, W. De Little, J. Field, W. Hall, D. Hickinbotham, A. Kirk, W. Noble, W. Murphy, H. M'Lean, J. M'Shane, H. Steedman, D. Thomson, C. M'Arthur, C. Palmer, J. Wilson (captain), G. Watson, D. Whitelaw, R. Robinson, T. Cahill. Mr. George Steedman acts as manager, and the following members of the Geelong Club accompany the team, namely:—H. P. Douglass, Strachan, F. Eddy, C. Campbell, F. Livingstone, W. Budsey, and A. Gilchrist. The team will engage in practice on the Association Cricket Ground, Moore Park, to-morrow (Friday) afternoon, at 3 o'clock, and on Saturday they meet the East Sydney Club, who will put forth a very strong team. On Tuesday they play the Sydney Club; on Thursday the Petersham Club; and on Saturday, the 15th, a combined team of New South Wales. Trams will run direct to the ground, and should the weather keep fine, no doubt the attendances will be large.

The Trickett testimonial committee meet this evening at Punch's Hotel for the purpose of receiving subscriptions and transacting important business.

Our Grafton correspondent telegraphs that fast work was performed by a number of horses yesterday morning. Shamrock is a great favourite for the City Handicap. Royal Blood, Yately, Young Australian, Lyra, and Princess of Lorne are all fancied for that event; and for the C. R. J. C. Handicap, Jason, Retrospect, Fitzroy, Royal Blood, Arrowflight, and Lady Vandah have been backed. Arrowflight has not worked since Saturday, and is reported slightly lame. Some very good two-year-olds will make their appearance at this meeting.

AMUSEMENTS.

No particularly striking change occurred in the theatrical programmes last night. The most popular of the dramas presented was "Jeames" at the Opera House. This presents many interesting scenes of home life, and Mr. Marshall as the footman introduces a being that nearly everyone who visits London sees and laughs at. Miss Taylor plays the part of Mary Ann excellently, and as the other characters are also ably sustained, the audience was kept in a continuous state of merriment. At the Gaiety Theatre "La Fille de Madame Angot" ran very merrily, and the music was pleasingly rendered. Popular favour seems to be receding from "The Passing Regiment," which is being produced at the Theatre Royal, although the piece is well placed on the stage and creditably played. At the Queen's Theatre last night a benefit was given to Mr. Charles Burford. A play entitled "The Mysteries of Sydney," written anonymously, was presented. It could scarcely be dignified with the name of a drama, and was remarkable principally for the personalities it introduced. Breaks occurred for songs and dances, and some very creditable scenery was produced. The entertainment at the Victoria Hall was given for the benefit of the City Fire Brigade, several members of which were present. As usual the pictures of the American war were much admired, and the lecture explanatory of them given by Miss Raymond was heartily applauded.

THE MERCANTILE ROWING CLUB BALL.

Last night, the old Exhibition building, Prince Alfred Park, was again the scene of one of the most brilliant social gatherings of the year—the Mercantile Rowing Club's annual ball. This is the sixth assemblage of the kind that has been held by the club; and although circumstances may have combined to make the attendance at previous ones larger, the success of this exceeded anticipation, and everything passed off very agreeably. The body of the hall was enclosed by draperies of white, relieved by broad stripes of crimson and blue, the flags of the principal rowing clubs, and pretty little bannerets, effective in decoration, though without any special significance. At each end of the building were naval trophies of oars and flags, that at the north end having in the centre the coat of arms of the colony, and that at the south the Royal arms. All around the gallery, oars were used with good effect as decorations; wreaths of greenery were looped from pillar to pillar, and half-way up each pillar was a bracket bearing a gilt basket of flowers, with a shield and banner trophy above it. At the southern entrance, where visitors alighted, they were received in a carpeted ante room, leading to a large waiting room, with the ladies' cloak room on one side, and the gentlemen's on the other. These places were under the management of Mr. Askham, and the arrangements were so good that there was none of the disorder which characterised the close of the ball last year. This waiting room was divided from the ballroom by rich hangings of crimson cloth and white lace. The fountain was set playing, and the plash of its waters was as grateful to the ear as the coolness thus imparted to the air was pleasant. The basin was decorated with ferns. Below the stage a number of other graceful ferns were arranged, and the decorations generally were so tasteful as to do credit to Mrs. Walker, to whom they were entrusted. The musicians were the Young Australian Band, under Mr. J. R. Hardy, and the programme—which they played in excellent style and with great precision of time—was as follows:—1. Quadrille, "Olivette." 2. Valse, "Blue Danube." 3. Lancers, "Pirates of Penzance." 4. Polka, "Old English Fayre." 5. Schottische, "Kentucky Jubilee." 6. Quadrille, "Patience." 7. Mazurka, "Eva." 8. Valse, "Pirates of Penzance." 9. Lancers, "Tambour Major." 10. Galop, "Sleigh." 11. Polka, "Somebody's Darling." 12. Quadrille, "Pirates of Penzance." 13. Mazurka, "Katie." 14. Schottische, "Our Darling." 15. Lancers, "Patience." 16. Valse, "Tambour Major." 17. H. Schottische, "Athol." 18. Quadrille, "Belle Helene." 19. Galop, "Mercantile Rowing Club." 20. Lancers, "Lights o' London." 21. Valse, "Mercantile Rowing Club." 22. Schottische, "CoriSande." 23. Lancers, "Connaught." 24. Waltz and galop, "Nearest and Dearest, and Phantom." Messrs. A. Read and Giltinan were masters of the ceremonies, and they were well assisted by the members of the ball committee. The supper, a sumptuous repast, well served, was provided by the City Catering Co., and the liquors, with the exception of some very fine light wine from the Coolalta cellars of Mr. Wilkinson—were supplied by Allt and Co. The traffic arrangements made by Inspector Oram were carried out by Mr. M'Ilveen without a hitch, the most thorough order being maintained, although only one carriage at a time could set down its occupants. Altogether there must have been about 1000 people at the ball, and as a considerable proportion of the ladies, and a few of the gentlemen, were in fancy dress, the appearance of the ballroom was brilliant as well as animated. One gentleman indeed wore a costume so fanciful that he was requested to withdraw. With extremely bad taste, seeing that the request came from the secretary, he refused to do so, and this was the only circumstance in connection with the ball which could in any way be regretted. Among the costumes most noticeable were:—Esmeralda, Lily of the Valley, Patience, Rule Britannia, Marie Stuart, Spanish peasant girl, Maritana, American Cigarette, Violet, Lady Teazle, Jockey Girls (2), Castilian Lady, and Folly, Night and Morning, Fiji Chief, Land Sales, Blue Beard, Archibald Grosvenor, Captain Corcoran, and Bicyclist. No one worked more for the success of the ball than the hon. secretary, Mr. D. Murray, and in several members of the committee he found able coadjutors.

There has been an unprecedented rush of emigrants to America this spring. During April close upon 39,000 sailed from Liverpool, 32,328 being bound for the United States, and 6306 for Canada. There were 16,794 English, 17,768 foreigners (principally Germans), 3972 Irish, 161 Scotch. During the first three months of the year 34,393 emigrants left the Mersey for America.

LECTURE.

Last evening a lecture was delivered in the large hall of the Technical College by Mr. Squire W. Pye, on the subject of "Scientific Agriculture," before a fairly large audience. Mr. Pye's success as a cultivator of the orange tree is so widely known in the colony that it is almost superfluous to mention it here, and the knowledge of the perfection to which his father carried his extensive orchard and orangery has been mentioned by Mr. Anthony Trollope, in his work on Australia, as an instance of what had been and could be done in that department of agriculture in our colony. These facts enabled Mr. Pye to speak with some authority on the subject he lectured upon, and that his statements and remarks were appreciated was evidenced by the attention with which they were listened to by his audience. The Hon. J. M'Intosh occupied the chair, in the absence of Mr. Bruce, Chief Inspector of Stock, who had been expected to preside but who was unfortunately unable to do so. In introducing the lecturer the chairman remarked that any one going through the colony could not but be disgusted at the manner in which, in very many instances, cereals were cultivated. This was most unsatisfactory. Nothing could have a more powerful effect in making a country great than agriculture. It was a pursuit which had to be followed in every community, and the more efficiently this was done the greater and more beneficial would be its results. Mr. Pye stated that he would, in the first instance, speak of wheat-growing under the present system and its pernicious effects, then he would endeavour to prove that 10 acres with manure would give a better return, without in any way impairing the fertility of the soil, than 20 acres would under the present system; and that by scientific agriculture—a proper system of subsoiling and drainage, deep ploughing, and the liberal use of manures, our farmers would speedily grow rich, and at the same time increase the fertility of their lands, and that in a few years we would be able to export more wheat annually than we grow at the present time. He would next refer to orange-growing, showing the slovenly way in which many orchards were cultivated, why they failed to produce good crops, and the causes of the diseases which affected the citrus tribe. Afterwards he would make a few remarks upon the great value of lime, also of nitrogen, phosphate of lime, potash, farmyard manure, and chemical manure. Referring to his first subject, the growing of wheat, he stated that the present system of growing in the colony was exactly similar to what it was in America 50 years ago, viz., one of the spoliation of land by robbing it of its mineral constituents. Last year we exported to New Zealand 2479 tons of bone-dust, to enable farmers there to grow produce for us. To Mauritius we exported 3229 tons of manure, including 200 tons of sulphate of ammonia, for the purpose of sugar-growing, &c., to be there manufactured and returned to us, instead of growing it in our own colony, and giving employment to hundreds of people. He exhibited a calculation by which he arrived at the result that, under the present system, a profit of £29 10s. could be made by cultivating 20 acres of land, or a profit of £1 9s. 6d. per acre; but, with manure, a profit of £29 15s. on 10 acres of land, or £2 19s. 6d. per acre, could be made. By the use of manure, and cultivating land on a scientific system, the produce of fertile fields might be doubled, and worn-out soils be made productive. He maintained that to keep up the fertility of our fields farmers must become acquainted with the general principles of agricultural chemistry, that they might understand the ingredients of the soil, and the constituents of the plants they wished to cultivate, and more especially the artificial manures which were now indispensable to the growth of plants. Referring to orange-growing, the lecturer stated that that department of agriculture in the county of Cumberland was a very profitable pursuit to those who understood it; but he regretted that ninety-nine out of every hundred who possessed orange orchards knew very little from a scientific point regarding the culture, failure of crops, and causes of the many diseases affecting the whole citrus tribe. The many diseases affecting that tribe were attributable to only three causes. 1. Slovenly cultivation and bad drainage. 2. Exhaustion of the soil by the removal of its mineral constituents in the fruit. 3. Injudicious Propagation: On the point of propagation, Mr. Pye stated that he had come to the conclusion that if large trees were required and good fruit, the seedling of the common orange was the proper stock to use; if medium trees, good bearers, long-lived, and healthy, the bitter or Seville orange stock; if small trees, good bearers, good fruit, the mandarin should be used for a stock; and if short-lived trees, with good crops while they lasted, were required, with plenty of red scale and coarse fruit, the common lemon should be used as a stock. If an improvement in the general health of the plant, and good crops of fruit with a rich flavour were required, the stocks should be obtained from New Caledonia or from some of the adjacent islands. The soil best suited to the growth of the orange was a loam mixed with vegetable matter with a porus subsoil, as there was more of a uniformity of moisture in both dry and wet seasons in a soil of that description than in soils having a subsoil of clay or shale. Black or brown soils, with a clay subsoil, were also suitable if properly drained; and if the water in the adjacent creeks were slightly brackish it was further evidence of the quality of the soil for orange-growing, as the saline matter in such soil had a very beneficial effect upon its growth. Light sandy soils were also suitable, but required much manure. The aspect most suitable for orange trees is a sheltered one, N., S.E., and W. He then spoke of the valuable effects of various chemical bodies in the soil. Lime was of the greatest importance to agriculture. After being burned and slaked, it should be applied to the soil in quantities varying from 20 to 50 bushels to the acre, before losing its caustic properties by too long an exposure to the air. Nitrogen was another valuable substance in manure. Sulphate of ammonia at 18s. a cwt. was, he believed, the cheapest and best manure, containing nitrogen, as it furnished the soil with 20 per cent. of that chemical. Phosphate of lime played a very prominent part in agriculture. Bone dust should contain fully 60 per cent. of this phosphate, but he was afraid if several of the samples now sold in the colony were analysed they would hardly be found to contain one-half of that. Super-phosphate of lime (bones digested by sulphuric acid) was preferable to bone dust as a manure, because it contained about 40 per cent. of soluble phosphate, while bone dust might only contain from 5 to 10 per cent. Potash formed a large proportion of the manurial constituents of nearly all plants and trees. Farm manure for its nitrogen phosphates, potash, and lime, was of very little value, and being of such a bulky nature, and its composition so invariable, and also the trouble of incorporating it with the soil, the game was hardly worth the candle to cast it on to the land. If the soil were deficient in ammonia it required 137lb. of farmyard manure for 1lb. of ammonia. If deficient in phosphate of lime or of potash, 100lb. were required to furnish even 1lb. Twenty-eight pounds of chemical manure equalled one ton of farmyard manure. The lecturer was applauded at the conclusion of his address, and, a vote of thanks having been passed to him, he, in acknowledging it, strongly recommended all interested in agriculture to study the chemistry of soils and plants.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL.

The fortnightly meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held last night at the Royal Hyde Park Hotel. Mr. J. Talbot presided, and the following societies were represented:—Sydney Progressive Carpenters and Joiners, Bricklayers, Ironmoulders, Plasterers, Boilermakers, Seamen's Union, Quarrymen, Newcastle Labour League, Coachmakers, Curriers; Coalminers, Hunter River District; Coopers, United Glassmakers, Associated Society of Plumbers, Gasfitters, &c.; and Stonemasons. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The miners' strike committee reported that nothing had been done since last meeting, the strike having terminated. The patent laws committee reported that a sub-committee had been formed to draft a bill for presentation to Parliament. Mr. Crockett was appointed to act on behalf of the council on this sub-committee. Mr. Dooley said that it was time the council took some steps to put a stop to the immigration which was going on, because instead of there being a dearth of labour, the market was overstocked. It was not true that the whole of the immigrants by the Samuel Plimsoll had been engaged, as stated in the papers. He moved that some action be taken by the council with regard to the matter. The motion was seconded by Mr. J. Stewart, and after discussion, in which several members took part, the motion was adopted unanimously. Messrs. Hall and Fry were elected as nominators for the ensuing six months. Mr. Hall asked for information in regard to the Technical College committee, which was supplied by Mr. Edmonds and Mr. Roylance. The meeting then terminated.

From the circumstances arising out of the trial of Guiteau, a bill has been introduced into the United States Congress for the purpose of defining legal insanity.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

At the monthly meeting of the Royal Society of New South Wales, on Wednesday evening, the chairman said that they had received during the past month 58 volumes from various American societies, and 29 from foreign sources, several of the volumes being more than ordinarily interesting, especially some of those received from America. The list of books referred to is as follows:—American Journal of Philology, vol. 1, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4—vol. 2, Nos. 5 and 6; American Chemical Journal, vol. 1, Nos. 1 to 6—vol. 2, Nos. 1 to 6—vol. 3, Nos. 1 to 3; American Journal of Mathematics, vol. 3, Nos. 2 and 4; The Johns Hopkins University Register, 1880-81—presented by the Johns Hopkins University; Proceedings of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, vol. 8, parts 1 and 2; Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society, vol. 19, Nos. 107, 108; Proceedings of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, parts 1, 2, 3, 1880; Report of the Comptroller of Currency, 1880; Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, 1878 and 1879; Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers U. BOROUGH COUNCIL.

North Willoughby.—Special meeting held on June 17. Present, the full council. Minutes read and confirmed. Correspondence: Letter from Lands Office, showing on which roads land would be reserved out of the 100 above high water-mark for wharfage and public purposes on the Lane Cove and Parramatta rivers. From Treasury, asking for return of value of ratable property. From Mr. W. B. Solling, complaining of Greenwich wharf, and of the assessment on Mrs. Ffrench's land; assessment considered very moderate. Letter to Mr. Farnell, M.P., re deputation to Minister for Works to urge the necessity of tramway extension to Manly and to Lane Cove, and that a bridge be erected across The Spit at Middle Harbour; letter from same, day to be arranged after the Minister's return from the west. Accounts amounting to £42 7s. were passed for payment. On the motion of Alderman Best, the council clerk was instructed to have metal put on Tambourine Bay-road, next pipe culvert. The tender of Robert Campbell, to stump and clear Adolphus-street for £8 per acre, was accepted. The tender of John Robinson, to form Market-street for 30s. per chain, was accepted. Monthly meeting held July 1, at 3 p.m.—Present—The Mayor, and Aldermen Seldon, Best, Johnson, and Fleming. Minutes read and confirmed. Correspondence: Letter from borough of Camperdown, asking the council to co-operate to get power for all municipal councils to assess and rate all public buildings within their boundaries. Received; council will co-operate. Letter from the Under-Secretary for Lands, informing council that the Under-Secretary for Finance and Trade had been requested to cause the sum of £150 to be paid to the trustees for expenditure in improving the reserve for recreation. From Mr. H. Rosenfeldt, asking to be paid for stumping, clearing, and forming done by him on Frederick and Waltham streets. Received, considered. These are private subdivision streets, not proclaimed; or in council's charge, and as council did not authorize the work they cannot pay for it. From Mr. Harnett asking that the Lane Cove-road be aligned. Already applied for; to write again. From the M. Transit Commissioner, enclosing a time table for Royal Park and the Shore, Mr. T. Muston's line. The council consider the trips too many, and would suggest four trips a day as sufficient, and to be arranged so as not to interfere with Leafe's three trips to near same place. Accounts amounting to £77 9s. 8d. were passed for payment. Resolved on motion of Mayor and Alderman Fleming,—"That Sydney-street be stumped and cleared where required." Resolved on motion of Aldermen Johnson and Seldon,—"That Victoria-avenue be formed from junction with Penshurst-street, and pipes laid at said junction." On motion of Alderman Best, tenders to be invited for forming Burn's Bay-road, from two chain bit to Mr. Brook's property. Moved by Alderman Fleming,—"That the new stone culvert in High-street be extended to full width of the road, provided Messrs. Forsyth contribute £10 towards cost of the work." Amended by Aldermen Best and Seldon,—"To add after the word 'work' the words 'providing the East Ward has sufficient funds to pay for the same.'" Carried. Moved by Alderman Fleming,—"That the three bridges on the Flat Rock-road be raised six feet higher, and that Nos. 1 and 2 be made the width of 66 feet." Amendment by Aldermen Best and Seldon,—"That this stand over until the council know the state of the funds, and that the works committee inspect the same and report at next meeting." Carried. Moved by Alderman Fleming,—"That the Government be requested to sanction the council borrowing £2000 for expenditure on permanent works." Seconded by the Mayor. Amendment by Aldermen Best and Seldon,—"That it is inexpedient for the council to borrow money at present." For the amendment, Aldermen Best and Seldon; for the motion, Aldermen Fleming and Johnson. Moved by Alderman Fleming,—"That the stone culvert in Sydney-street be extended to full width of the road on the lower or east side." Seconded by the Mayor. Negatived. The council clerk was instructed to call a meeting of the finance committee for 2.30 p.m., 15th instant. The council approved of the estimate of £175, being required for stumping and clearing and forming the portion of Burns Bay-road, and culverts, proposed by Government as a deviation, and of the letter sent to the Department of Mines on the subject.—James Anderson, Council clerk.

The Russian Jewish Refugees.—A telegram from Brody to the Vienna Presse states that the misery of the Russian Jewish refugees collected at that place is beyond description. 10,000 persons are already assembled there without shelter and with the most scanty means of subsistence, and there are fresh arrivals every day. A frightful catastrophe is feared, as the Lemberg committee, as well as the Gallician authorities, send all the refugees to Brody, thus thrusting the whole responsibility for their care and maintenance on the local committee. The population of Brody are overwhelmed by the burdens imposed on them, and are unable to afford any further relief.

OUR ROME LETTER.

ROME, MAY 20.

The telegraph office can have made but little through ...ress customers these last few weeks, for there has ...ly been an item of news to transmit. This ...ation is in some degree due to the listless manner ...ich the moribund Parliament carries on its work, ... the comparative silence on matters political. ... Electoral Reform Bill, with its supplementary ...asure giving scrutin de liste in those localities which ...urn as many as five members, having passed both ...uses, and the suffrage having been tripled, the ...amber must be dissolved, and the general elections ...d so soon as the lists have been prepared ...d the requisite preliminaries for carrying the ...w system into operation are completed. The conse...ence is that Parliamentary men have lost all interest ... their duties, and are only busy in endeavouring to ...ure that re-election, which the alterations the ...form Bill has worked may make very difficult in ...ny cases. The leaders of the Opposition, convinced ...t it would be both useless and impolitic to attempt ...verthrow the Government before the elections are ...ld, refrain from provoking any crisis, and the ...inisters jog on in the most contented manner possible. ...hat may take place when the elections are held ...s yet too early to conjecture. In the ...artime, everybody is watching and waiting to ... if the Vatican will withdraw the prohibition ...inst the clericals being either "electors or elected." ...uld that be done, and the "faithful" enter actively ...o the contest, we may not only expect to see lively ...es, but the representation of the country more or ... entirely changed, for though the clericals may, ...haps, not be successful in returning many of their ...n men to the first new Parliament under the Reform ...t, they will exercise a very telling influence in all ...e constituencies by throwing all their weight at once ...o the scale in favour of the men likely to be least ...favourable to their interests. Another factor will ... that the moderate liberals will, in many places ...ere the clericals are not strong enough to run candi...es of their own, put forward those men most likely to ... the clerical vote, which can and no doubt always ...ll be unanimously withheld wherever the candi...es proposed are more or less equally objectional to ...m. This system of total abstention the clericals ... already well accustomed to, and taking into con...eration what that abstention has been up to the ...ent time, we may fairly calculate that should the ...pe tacitly permit them to take part in the next con...t, the number of voters will practically be very much ...re than tripled, for the reason that in consequence ... the prohibition, ne elette, ne elettore, the number of ...ers has, to all intents and purposes, hitherto been ...y much below what appeared, one may say, nomi...ly on the electoral lists. It has all ...g been stated by the clerical organs that ...t prohibition would be considered as a ...d letter so soon as the suffrage should be sufficiently ...eased to give their party a fair chance. They now ...the one hand decline to say whether this will be the ... or not, but on the other they are most active in ...ng their friends to make every preparation; to be ...ful that all the names of the faithful entitled to ... under the new law, are inscribed on the list; and ...e ready to act promptly when the Pope's pleasure is ...own. Clerical clubs and associations are being ...gently organized all over the kingdom, and all this ...paration can scarcely be making for nothing.

The energetic action England and France have taken ...ards Egypt, by sending out their combined squadron, ... given great displeasure here. For a long time ...ly has striven in every way to obtain an active ...ticipation in Egyptian matters. She has always ...d that she is entitled to this because her "colony" ...re—as is her mode of describing the number of ...lians residing or occupied there—is very much ...er than that of England and France put together. ... doubt it is numerically, but considering that that ...ber is nine-tenths composed of labourers of one ...d or another and that Italy's financial interests in ...ypt's welfare are but a fraction of what England, ...hout calculating France's share, has at stake in that ...ntry, the two great Western Powers have not been ...ling to look upon Italy's pretensions as sufficiently ...l founded. The establishment, however, of the ...alled European concert which followed the ...so-Turkish war gave her finally a voice in ... chapter. Her idea has been that the unity ...concert of the Powers implied, should include in ...ses that unity of action which would permit her to ... part in any movement. Consequently she is all ...more disgusted at being left out in the cold by ...gland and France having carried out their intention ...cting together alone without additional assistance, ... doubt that action has been taken upon the assent of ... other Powers, in which the Italian Government ... had to coincide, but an assent greatly insisted ..., as one says politely, "with your permission," to ...e who must make way for one. No doubt England ... France—and especially England—saw plainly that ... was no time for the repetition of the Dulcigno ...l demonstration farce, in which all the Powers took ..., and when no one could act with energy at the ...ent required, because some of the others were ...ys holding them back.

...nother matter about which Italian politicians are ...erned at present is the visit the Emperor and ...press of Austria have yet to pay in return for that ... by King Humbert and Queen Margherita to ...na in October last, and of which as yet nothing ...ive has been heard. With the exception of what ...ay call the few more conservative organs of the ...ral party, all the Liberal papers insist very natur... that inasmuch as the King and Queen of Italy ...t to visit the Emperor and Empress of Austria at ...na, the capital of their empire, the return visit ...ot be paid anywhere by them except at Rome ...out conveying a kind of slight to the Sover... of Italy. But then there is the Pope to be ...idered, and what would happen should he decline ...ceive a visit from their Imperial and Apostolic ...sties, as they are entitled at the Vatican, unless ... first went to see him there before going to the ...inal? And suppose they should go first to the ...an, what kind of impression would that make ... the Italians. That would be a worse slight than ...aying the return visit at Rome, for as the object ...eir coming would be to pay a debt of politeness ...from them, it is obvious it should be discharged ...moment they arrived. Here's the dilemma, and a ... while ago some of the more insistent Liberal ...s made such a fuss about the necessity of the ...rian visit being paid in Rome that the editor of ...ll-known Vienna paper felt obliged to instruct his ...spondent at Rome not to wire him any more ex... from the Italian papers on the subject. It must ...ken into consideration, however, that the King and ... of Italy did not incur a risk of offending any ... Power by going to Vienna to visit the Austrian ...eigns, whereas the Austrians cannot very well ... to Rome and go first to the Quirinal without ... offence to a Power which if not territorial is far ...rong in influence to be left out of consideration. ... days ago King Humbert went on in somewhat ...ountable trip to the Castle of Monza, near Milan, ... is the principal residence of the King and ... during the summer months, and a strong ...ssion prevails that it was not unconnected ... this still pending visit; and it is supposed ...he Emperor and Empress of Austria will choose ... time during the summer, when the King and ... are at Monza, and when Rome is reputed to be ...lthy, to pay the visit to them there. As usual at ...ime of year, there have been reports made, which ...ave reached Australia, that the Pope is suffering ...alth. These are altogether unfounded. They ...ated in consequence of the long delay there was ... appointing that general audience for all the ... Catholics the Rector of the Irish College asked for ... occasion of Cardinal Maccabe receiving his red ... The fact was that the Pope was somewhat in a ... on the subject. He did not want to be ...d to receive an address, which would involve the ...ity of his making a reply, which must of course ... reference to the actual state of Irish affairs. If ...pe could have felt at liberty to speak out freely ...our of law and order without the danger of ...ing the very strong Land League element among ...sident Irish clergy in Rome, and that large sec... the Irish Episcopate which has its most extreme ...ntative in the Archbishop of Cashel, there would ...s no delay. The Pope's sentiments are well .... At first it was decided that no address should ...nted, and then no reply would be requisite, but ... considerable amount of delay it was decided that the customary formalities should be observed, and his Holiness delivered a discourse, in which he spoke strongly in condemnation of the agitation the Land League have kept up, while praising the bishops generally for the moderation they have preached. To some Irish ears this sounded somewhat like a contradiction, but he began and ended by condemning the spirit of lawlessness prevailing, and so placed the weight in the balance on that side.

The COLLAPSE of a COURT of the ORDER of ROYAL FORESTERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of Friday last a paragraph appeared with reference to the above; and, emanating from that, attention was drawn on the following day to the subject by you in a sub-leader.

As the paragraph in question—after the third or fourth line—is altogether fallacious, it naturally follows that your premises, drawn from such a source, are equally erroneous, and therefore calculated to mislead the public, and do serious injury to an old-established friendly society. I shall be glad, therefore, if you will kindly allow me—who am more conversant with the subject than any other possibly can be—to state the facts of the case, and to show the cause of this now unavoidable collapse.

In the first place, the paragraph in question states, in the fifth line—"A large proportion of the surviving members are aged men." No doubt you will be surprised to learn, sir, that at the time of its collapse the court contained but 17 members altogether, and that only one old member was among the number. More than a third are under 30 years, and the remainder do not average more than 45 years. So much for the old members.

Again, it is stated.—"The supreme court of the order is now engaged in making an equitable distribution among young and sound lodges of the aged remnants of Court Friendship." Now, whoever was the author of the paragraph has made a misstatement. The supreme court is doing nothing of the kind.

As far as I am aware, no friendly society in the colony, except the Royal Foresters, makes provision in its rules for the reception of its members, whose branch, from unforseen causes, may be unable to meet its engagements; in some societies the members in such cases are left out in the cold altogether. Not so the Royal Foresters. Our rules provide that should a case of the kind occur, as in that of the late Court Friendship, "The members on producing a medical certificate, declaring them to be of sound health, shall select any branch of the order they may think proper to join, the supreme court paying all liabilities for such members for a period of six months. But should any member "as in the case of the one old member in Court Friendship," be made to obtain a certificate of good health, the supreme court takes over such members altogether, providing medical attendance, medicine, and sick pay. So much for the distribution of members.

Now for the cause of the collapse. In your sub-leader you say—"In this particular case there does not appear to have been any extraordinary cause to precipitate the collapse." From the slight information before you, you could not know; neither could you justly say what was the cause of the collapse, nor are your premises as to the "probable explanation" just ones. It is very improbable that the members of a lodge could ever be all old, as new blood is continually being introduced into all societies; hence the enormous increase of members. But the failure of Court Friendship was entirely owing to internal mismanagement. This Court has been established somewhere about 25 years, and for a long period was very successful. I have just referred to our district register, and I find that in June, 1874, they returned 95 old members, and registered eight new ones, in all 103 members; and their funds—free from all claims for funeral donations—nearing £200. In eight years their numbers decreased, as I have already stated, to 17, and their funds altogether vanished. Something very wrong must have taken place in the management to have caused this great collapse.

About the period referred to (1874), the Court was led by one of its prominent members to repudiate a case of sickness. The same member made an appeal to our Supreme Court to ratify this repudiation, but without success. At length the wife of the sick member sued the trustees to the District Court, and, of course, obtained a verdict. This same prominent member led them to appeal against the verdict, and this they also lost, having to pay all costs. The leaders should have been prosecuted for spending the funds in such an illegal manner. On one or two other occasions the same member led them into law, with the same results. Thus the funds of the Court were squandered in law expenses. Subsequently, the same member was principally the cause of the Court being separated for a time from the district; and, during this separation, another unfortunate claim was repudiated, which has not been met to this day.

At this time a large number of the members, seeing the state of mismanagement, and the manner in which the funds were being wasted, drew their clearances, and opened a new branch; and from that time the exodus has slowly but surely continued. Even under these circumstances the Court would have continued its existence had not claims been made upon them not provided for by the laws. As it was, they had no other alternative but to dissolve. I am, &c.,

JOHN HAMPTON,
Supreme Secretary, Order Royal Foresters.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I noticed in yours of the 8th June, a letter signed W. W. J. O'Reilly, M.D., such letter being a portion of the report of the New South Wales branch of the British Medical Association. With respect to the first recommendation, "That the medical men be furnished with examination forms to fill in when examining candidates," the Ancient Order of Foresters has for the last 15 years or more adopted this plan, and furnished the forms. As regards the fees for such examination, as the doctors get full fees for all good on the books, hundreds are paid for who have been admitted only for a few days or so. Taking the whole quarter, the doctor gets full fees for half services to all new members. The second conclusion is so thoroughly unbusiness-like that I do not think the gentlemen understood its full meaning. Imagine a professional man contracting to attend a society, and upon some of its members sending for him, to tell them that they are, or ought be, able to pay him private fees, and he would not then fulfil his contract. Builders and contractors are specially mentioned. Fancy the doctor's face if told by either, "Why, doctor, we know that our proper contract price is so and so, but we shall charge you extra because you get your money so easily, and can recover fees, which privilege is denied to us." Why, Sir, there are thousands of mechanics and labourers in wealthier circumstances than the worried and cheated builders and contractors who employ them, as if poverty's coat must perforce be always smeared with grease or mortar.

As to the third conclusion, "That the fee be a uniform one of £1," would the profession think it right to be compelled to pay the rough carpenter repairing his fences as much per day as he did the first-rate carpenter putting him up a geometrical staircase?

No one knows better than the profession (if you judge by their opinion of each other) how many there are whose only claim upon it is their license to kill. Now, as to the consistency of this resolution. I hold in my hand a list of some 15 tenders for attendance on an Oddfellows' lodge. These are from 10s. per year each family to 20s.—only two at 20s.—the 10s. one being quite pressing for them to accept his terms. One at 16s. was accepted. Another body pays £250 per annum to three medical gentlemen, and plenty applications at that. At per family, this comes to 6s. nearly, and if I take one of the most respectable chemist's estimate for some 15 societies he dispenses for at 7s. per annum, this is 13s. per annum for each member for doctor and medicine, instead of 27s.; and this dispensing is not by contract, but at full charges, less allowance for cash. As to paying extra for accidents and fractures, perhaps the doctors would like engagements when epidemics and midwifery cases were put. Why thousands of members of friendly societies never need, or call, a doctor, except in accidents or confinement cases, and they all pay the contract price for the latter.

Regarding the fourth resolution, "Members of friendly societies not to belong to more than one society," all the doctors need do is to do their duty firmly, and not endorse a certificate of another doctor (given, perhaps, carelessly), if they consider a person malingering.

As to the fifth resolution, "That the subscriptions of the various societies would be larger," no doubt this is true in some cases, but it is a matter beyond the province of the medical profession, and they are in no way qualified to give an opinion.

As to the sixth resolution, "That in societies the money for paying the medical officers and chemists should be kept separate" this is certainly an unwarrantable insinuation against the integrity of friendly societies. In some thirty years' experience I have never known a medical man or chemist to lose a penny by a society. Such a thing may have occurred; I have never known of it. Doubtless the shopkeepers and mechanics who work for and supply the medical profession would like a legislative enactment to secure payment of their various accounts, for I have never heard the profession were more prompt to pay than others. So long as their bills are paid, what right have they to interfere with a society's affairs? As regards the seventh resolution, "That two doctors and two actuaries should be on the Royal Commission now sitting," that is merely an opinion. I myself think that if one of each profession, men of power and undoubted skill, were upon it, it would help the object much; but certainly not two, for they can agree in nothing except that their fees should be larger, and they paid before everybody else.

I hope that none of the gentlemen of the medical profession whom I have the pleasure and advantage of knowing will take offence at my remarks—they may be rough but are not meant to be unkind; but there are two sides to a question, and I now speak and write for thousands who can think but have no means of writing or speaking for themselves. As regards the individual medical gentleman who attends the society I belong to, he has been elected some eighteen times without opposition, and the two gentlemen who preceded him were each six and seven years with us; and there are many similar cases. I am, &c.,

JOHN SLADE.

James Dolan, the king of pick-pockets (says an American paper) has died of heart disease in the Sing Sing prison. He boasted that he could pick pockets equally well sitting down, erect, or standing on his head. He was arrested at the Paris Exposition, with Red Leary, and claimed to be a professor in an American institute visiting Europe to consult oculists, but each got three and a half years in the galleys at Brest.

OUR MELBOURNE LETTER.

MELBOURNE, JULY 4.

This is the day when it is proper to write leading articles in praise of the American Republic, and in order to show what a fool the old-country was to let North American colonies have their independence. Also, it is considered the correct thing—using the slang of the period—to call upon the American Consul, and assure him that his country is the finest country on the face of the earth. Perhaps it does no great harm to fulfil either of these assumed duties; but it seems to me that if some of this perfunctory work were left undone, we should be none the worse for the omission. As far as the leading article business is concerned, we could certainly dispense with what is confessedly, and upon the surface, a forced function. Fourth of July compliments are very much in the nature of wedding-breakfast speeches, when every remark is a matter of course, and the same things are said which are said on all like occasions, and which things everybody is sick at listening to.

In like manner, it is expedient, at this moment, to express some kind of congratulation at the remarkable general prosperity of this country. The revenue is increasing. We have taken more money in taxes during the last year than ever we did before in a corresponding time, and we are, in consequence, spending a good deal more money in the satisfaction of our collective wants. We are to be put into such a complete state of defence that no foreign foe will ever dare to attack us. The army is to be a real army, and it is to be paid for its fighting, whether the fighting be prospective or actual. A very large Supply Bill has been voted for current expenses, and hardly any questions were asked about what was going to be done with the money. And yet, with all this prosperity, provisions are growing dearer and dearer, and worse and worse in quality. It is apparently impossible to get any eatable butter, and the price, nevertheless, is 3s. a pound. Logically, therefore, one cannot very well help wishing for the bad times to come again; for when we had bad times we had certainly good and cheap butter. The grass is now long and green, and yet such produce as is said to depend on a plentifulness of green grass, is dearer and less palatable than when the colony was understood to be a verdureless desert. There is no getting at a proper explanation of these anomalies.

But if butter is bad and dear, beer is to be cheapened. That boon is apparently quite settled. And coincidently with this announcement, a quotation has been made from one of the home medical journals, in which it is shown that beer is the very worst liquid that a man can drink; that it muddles his brain, enlarges his liver, softens his muscles, and, in a general way, swinifies him. So that when one looks round Melbourne from an eminence, and sees the numerous large structures, whose sole purpose is the brewing of ale, one feels that, if this denunciation of ale be true, a great deal of capital, energy, and intelligence, are wrongly employed. There is also some concern felt on the subject of tobacco. The smokers, who probably represent 90 per cent. of the whole population, complain bitterly of the retention of the Excise duty; but they quite forget that it is in their power to refuse to pay it, by giving up smoking. Not being myself a smoker, I could witness the annihilation of the tobacco plant quite complacently; and when I remember the abominable selfishness of nearly all smokers, and their almost brutal disregard of the comfort and feelings of those who dislike tobacco, I could almost wish that the vegetable world were lessened at least to the extent of the Nicotiana.

And speaking of beer, a number of philanthropists have just asked the Government to grant them Sunday Island for the purposes of an inebriate retreat. But as Sunday Island is twenty miles long, and is occasionally a peninsula and not an island, its advantages for this purpose do not seem to be apparent. Therefore, the philanthropists will not get Sunday Island. Some other philanthropists are taking steps to obtain a local-option Act, and it would be nothing surprising if they were to obtain it. For such a Legislature as this of Victoria is exactly the Legislature to declare for extreme moral measures, on the lucus a non principle.

Some of the philanthropists have been lifting up their voices against the making of post-mortem examinations upon the bodies of patients who die in the Melbourne Hospital. And herein we have illustrated a very curious kind of selfish inconsistency. For while it is the common rule to blame medical men when they are discovered, or, at least, supposed, to be ignorant, it is an equally common practice to do everything possible to prevent their acquiring the practical knowledge to be gained by a scientific inspection of diseased bodies. We have seen how, in the old country, the study of physiology has been virtually discouraged by the enactment of a vivisection law, and this howl against post-mortems here is in the same spirit of obstruction to scientific progress.

Passing from science to literature, a gentleman named Rex has been sent to gaol for appropriating to his own use some sixty books from a suburban public library. It did not appear that he had made any attempt to dispose of them, but had taken them to his own house out of a pure liking for them. He was spoken of as having been occasionally engaged in literary pursuits, so that one can hardly dispossess oneself of a kind of sympathy for a man whose love of learning was greater than his means, and whose morality could not bear the strain of the strong desire be experienced to be possessed of the authors he admired. And in justice, it must be said that he stole with true bibliological discernment.

The ingenuity of another gentleman whose needs were in excess of his means, prompts a very large measure of admiration. He inserted in the Argus an advertisement, as if from a young woman in sore distress, addressed to an imaginary gentleman who was supposed to have deserted her. It appears that a number of benevolent, but indiscreet and undiscerning persons, sent money to the address given, and that the needy young man did very well with his scheme. And yet he is now in the hands of the police, and the poetry of the little history, of which he is the hero, will be spoiled very shortly by involuntary oakum-picking or bluestone-breaking. The end of these ingenious projects is so frequently entirely different from what was contemplated by the projectors, which failure is not in the direction of encouragement to the inventive genius of a large number of clever persons who look to their wits as a means of subsistence.

For example, there is Bryant—otherwise the Count de Beaumont—who has just gone to prison for five years. And yet Bryant is an exceedingly clever person, only unfortunately his cleverness did not take a direction parallel with the law. He managed badly, just as Mr. Ogle did. Mr. Ogle was a "society" man, and wanted a good deal more money than his ordinary avocation brought him; and so he took money which somebody else had earned. So now he is on his way back from England to his adopted country. Mr. Ogle had the reputation of being a very clever man. His elegant friends are quite distressed that he should have deceived them as to his means; still worse offence, that he should have allowed himself to be taken. The romance would have been more nearly complete, if he had never been discovered.

And relevant to gaols, the hangman, Upjohn, has been making himself very disagreeable. Naturally, it will be remarked that it is his duty to be disagreeable; but the disagreeableness now referred to has not occurred in connection with his duty. Upjohn, in fact, has too much spare time on his hands, and he employs it riding about in omnibuses, which riding would be an innocent amusement enough, if it were not that Upjohn's liking for conversation prompts him to address his fellow-passengers without an introduction. And as his remarks are not characterised by a fastidious refinement, this eagerness to extend his acquaintance has caused occasional embarrassment. Now and then he qualifies himself for a period of retirement in prison, and it seems a pity, in view of the importance of the office he holds, that he should not be lodged permanently in the establishment where his duties are performed. So far the Government have not seen their way to an arrangement of this kind, but the inhabitants of Coburg and Brunswick hold very strong opinions in favour of such an arrangement.

Mr. A. T. Clark, the other night, occupied the House for some time with the grievances of one Wright, a railway operative, who, he said, had been defamed by one Driscoll, another railway operative, which Driscoll had not been punished for, as he ought, because he (Driscoll) was a Roman Catholic, and therefore in favour with the head of the Government. But, after a great deal of talk and bad blood, and hot words, it came out that there was no grievance at all, and Mr. Clark for the present subsided. The other Clark, W. to wit, has also taken up a grievance—namely, the grievance of over-work of the railway employees, who, he desires, should work no longer than other horny-handed gentlemen work, namely, eight hours out of the twenty-four. And from the encouragement given him, it is very likely that he will win for his clients what he proposes.

And this mention of leisure is suggestive of holidays generally, which include the 1st of July, the reason for keeping which as a holiday very few people know, or care to know; but they take the holiday all the same, and when they get it they do not know what to do with it. Consequently, last Saturday saw a number of holiday-makers forlornly walking to and fro, vainly trying to make the hours pass pleasantly.

The LABOUR TRADE in the WESTERN PACIFIC.

We learn from the Argus that a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, covering a report by Commodore Wilson on the above subject, has been forwarded to his Excellency the Governor and laid before Parliament. The Commodore, whose report was drawn up at the end of last year, defines the labour trade in the Western Pacific, which he declared to be a matter deserving the most serious consideration and searching inquiry, as to the employment of natives ashore and afloat; and deals with the subject under these different heads. The trade, as carried on with the British colonies of Queensland and Fiji, though now conducted legally, is still, he asserts, far from being in a satisfactory condition. Kidnapping in its worst form, such as the running down of canoes, capturing natives by force, and shooting those who attempt to escape, has been practised quite recently by French vessels, but has apparently ceased among the British ships. Accusations of this kind are still made against vessels flying the British flag, but in the only instance in which an inquiry was made—that of the Winifred, of Fiji—the accusation was proved to be without foundation. The Commodore is, however, of opinion that the practice may yet exist among vessels employing natives for the fisheries, or such purposes, where no Government agents are carried, and little supervision exercised.

Labour vessels are licensed by the Governors of the colonies, or the British Consul at Noumea, New Caledonia. The system of issuing these licenses is described as being very lax. In the case of vessels employed in the transport of labourers for employment on land, this laxity is of less importance, as the ships carry Government agents, and trade under more or less stringent immigration regulations. Trading vessels employing natives afloat are subject to no such restrictions, and abuses are prevalent. These abuses are described at length. The natives employed by trading ships number many thousands, and are engaged in the preparation and collection of copra, beche-de-mer, as divers for pearlshell, and as seamen. They are engaged outside the colonies, beyond the control of the Colonial Governments, and are virtually without protection from their white employers. The Commodore states that he has heard of the master of a trading vessel openly boasting that he has employed native crews for years without paying them a shilling of wages. His plan was to compel the unhappy black, by ill-usage, to desert when his wages were due, and then fill his place at the next island. The chief cause for these abuses is the manner in which licenses are granted by colonial Governors to men of whose characters they are completely ignorant. The case of one Loeman, who was licensed by the Governor of New South Wales, is cited. This man is described as "about the most unscrupulous person in the Western Pacific," who had been at one time in the employ of Ross Lewin, who had the "unenviable reputation of being the most successful manstealer in the Pacific."

The Queensland regulations for the guidance of the recruiting agent are said to be very good, but in some important respects they are a dead letter. The prohibition against giving barter to the chief, friends, or relations of the recruits is never attended to, nor the regulation forbidding the export of arms and ammunition from the colony. The treatment of natives on the plantations is said to be generally good. This was especially the case in Fiji, "under the fostering care of Sir A. Gordon, the late Governor, who, because he insisted on justice being done to the labourer, has earned the compliment of being heartily hated and abused by the planters, who only too frequently wish to treat their free labourers as slaves." The Commodore, however, complains that the remuneration given on the plantations is ridiculously small—in Fiji £3 a year, in Queensland £6. The rations too in Queensland, though ample, are said to be unsuited to the natives, and the death rate, reaching sometimes 85 per 1000 annually, is probably due partly to this cause and the long hours of labour. The immigration regulations of these colonies appear to be sufficient to insure the fair enlistment of the labourers recruited, but this is not to be always the case. The natives are deceived as to their destination, and when they suppose themselves to be engaged for a trading voyage find themselves, against their will, at work in the cane fields of Queensland or Fiji. The most distressing hardship, however, is said to be the manner in which the natives are returned after the expiry of their agreements. It is difficult to find a particular village or island, but unless a man is returned to the locality from which he was taken, he is sure to be consigned to slavery if not to death, as well as to the forfeiture of all the reward of his three years' labour. The search for the locality is often hastily given up, the "unfortunates are landed anywhere, and have been seen gesticulating and wild with despair as the boat pulls away, leaving them to their fate." The reason for the frequent return of islanders to the colonies after a visit to their native islands is said to be that the men find that during their absence in the colonies they have lost their places in their own communities. A man who finds his wife mated to another, his hut in ruins, his cultivation patch overgrown with bushes, himself speedily left with nothing but a suit of slop clothes and a European rifle, and a despised member of his native community, is glad to ship again for the colonies.

In conclusion, the Commodore suggested the adoption of a number of rules for the prevention of the abuses to which he refers, though he doubts their efficacy. He says:—"I do not deceive myself by supposing that the evils now so prevalent would be entirely stopped, even by the adoption of these rules—nothing can possibly do so but the entire prohibition of the employment of native labour—but they will do much to ameliorate the condition of men who, in many instances, are far worse off than were even slaves under Europeans or Americans." He appends a report furnished to the Queensland Government on the condition of islanders employed on plantations in that colony, and warmly advocates the substitution for Polynesians of Indian or Chinese coolies.

A long letter from Baron Miklouho-Maclay, the Russian naturalist and traveller, detailing abuses that came under his observation, is also added, and the report concludes with a repetition of the assertion that the labour trade is "fraught with evils not even second to the slave trade, which England expended so much money to put an end to."

Attached to the report are appendices, giving statistical information concerning the vessels licensed for the labour trade.

THE COMET.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—This interesting object is still visible with a telescope, and has a faint tail about a degree in length. Your astronomical readers will be glad to learn that a very satisfactory series of observations has been obtained here, extending without interruption from the 19th of last month to the present date. It was first detected here with the telescope in strong twilight on the evening of June 15th, but owing to the sky not being sufficiently dark to show small stars of comparison, I was unable to obtain any accurate observations for position. From the 19th, however, to the present date the differential measurements have been accurate, and they will, I trust, serve, in combination with other southern observations, for a correction of the European determination of the orbit. Egbert's ephemeris, communicated some weeks ago by the Boston Scientific Society, was a remarkably good one, considering that it was founded on observations extending over 11 days only at the close of March last. It represented the apparent place of the comet, within a degree, on the 15th June, and be it remembered this date occurs after the perihelion passage, and at a time when the comet's apparent motion was very rapid. Dr. Lamp's ephemeris being derived from more extended observations, represents the apparent path of the comet pretty closely, but his elements will, of course, require correction from the observations now being made. Although I did not succeed before the 19th in getting any accurate observations for position I obtained some micrometer measures of the planet-like nucleus on the evening of the 16th, which gave 5700 miles as the real diameter of this part of the comet. I also succeeded in making a series of observations for the future determination of the real length of the comet's tail. When first seen here, on the evening of the 15th ultimo, the comet's distances from the sun and earth were respectively 23 and 89 millions of miles. On the evening of Sunday next, the 9th instant, these respective distances will be 89 and 120 millions of miles.

The Bulletin Astronomique et Meteorologique, recently received from the Imperial Observatory at Rio de Janeiro, in treating of the comets of 1881 gives a new determination of the elliptic elements of the great comet of that year, and adds, "These elements give to the comet a period of about 2954½ years. The calculations are by M. Bossert, who has employed 423 observations, extending from the 21st May to the 29th September, with which he has formed eight normal positions. The observations employed are those made in the Observatories of Windsor, Melbourne, Cordova, Cape of Good Hope, and Rio de Janeiro, for the southern hemisphere, and almost all those obtained in the northern hemisphere." I may here remark, however, that the comet was observed by Dr. Winnecke, of Strasburg, as late as January last, so that many more observations will be available for the further correction of M. Bossert's orbit. I trust the observations of the present comet at Windsor will prove as useful as those made last year on the great comet.

TAKE NOTE OF THIS.—Another large steamer, the [illegible], arrived yesterday, bringing a large cargo for this port, and we notice that Riley Brothers are again to the fore with 26 packages of new and seasonable drapery. These will all be opened to-day, and as they include some of the latest London styles in boys' suits, hats, &c., we would advise parents who have boys to clothe to pay them a visit to-morrow. They are the cheapest drapers in Australia and the trams take you close to their [illegible].—ADV.

The REVENUES of NEW SOUTH WALES and VICTORIA.

"The world will judge of their ultimate success by their relative progress."—Earl Derby, at the Cobden Club, London, July 1, 1882.

The present Earl of Derby is generally admitted to be one of the most impartial and unprejudiced of men, and nobody will dispute the truth of his aphorism quoted above. All the world over men invariably judge of the future by the past, and never expect a change in the phenomena of the universe until they see some basis of reason for a change. But how long must the chain of sequence be maintained in order to justify expectation? His Lordship was comparing New South Wales and Victoria when he uttered his very safe philosophic axiom, and if the comparison is to be extended to the whole period since Victoria was separated from New South Wales, 31 years ago, the advantage is unquestionably on the side of the younger colony, which has grown from 97,489 inhabitants to 890,000 at the present date, while her mother has grown in the same time only from 197,168 to about 800,000 up to date, and that population test is the principal measure of the relative progress of young communities. For the whole period of comparison Victoria can boast a growth of 814 per cent. on her population at the end of the separation year, and New South Wales a growth of only 305 per cent. It is dangerous for people to base their expectations upon such vague generalizations as this of Lord Derby's. The conditions of progress, especially in new colonies of vast extent and variety of resource, are constantly changing, and those which cause success in one decade may be wanting in the next. The sudden growth of Victoria for the twenty years of her existence, ending with 1870, was due to the extraction of £161,521,008 of gold from her soil, two-thirds of it within the first ten years. But nature favours no country with such windfalls very often, and they do not seem likely to be repeated in Victoria, at least, to the same extent relative to other industries. Since the close of the abnormal gold era New South Wales has grown in population at the rate of 59 per cent., and Victoria at the rate of only 22½ per cent., upon the number of persons each colony returned at the end of 1870. Earl Derby's axiom is right enough when interpreted in the light of facts like these, but without them it is worse than useless—it is misleading.

Another test of the relative progress of the two communities is furnished by the state of their revenues and the sources from which they are derived. Two communities nearly equal in numbers, and enjoying in nearly the same degree the benefits of good government, should be tolerably equal in their cost of government, supposing their executives to be entrusted with similar functions. The revenues of New South Wales and Victoria for the quarter ended last Friday have just been published, and we propose to subject them to comparison by rearranging the particulars under heads appropriate to both. The revenue of New South Wales exceeded that of Victoria absolutely by £526,518 for the quarter, and by £1,625,042 for the year ended last week. Yet our neighbours consider their finances so flourishing that Parliament is being asked to consider proposals for the reduction of taxation. What might they not do with a revenue like that of New South Wales, which, at the rate of last quarter, would yield for their larger population £8,399,532 per annum. They could abolish all their taxes for a year with such a windfall, and still have a surplus in hand to enable the Government to go on without embassies to London and without Black Wednesdays. How come the two colonies to be so differently situated? Does the New South Wales Treasury take too much from the people, or the Victorian Treasury too little? Sir Bryan O'Loghlen himself confesses that he has more than enough, and unless Mr. Watson has some extravagances to feed in this colony, he is receiving now at the rate of two millions sterling per annum more than he ought to spend upon the ordinary functions of government. What he has actually spent during the last four quarters is £6,143,013 from the Consolidated Revenue, and £3,800,436 from loan funds. It follows that when Parliament meets there will be £1,070,784 more to be dissipated as "accumulated surplus funds" from the operations of the last 12 months, if the guardians of the public purse continue to sanction this clumsiest, but to Ministers most convenient, method of muzzling members and buying the support of constituencies. A school of economic reformers in matters of public finance does not exist in New South Wales; the Mills, Ricardos, Humes, Fawcetts, Cobdens, Brights, Peels, and Gladstones of England would be unable to teach us anything, and the only schoolmaster who has the least authority—stern necessity—has to use the cane in good earnest to secure discipline and attention to his lessons in the scrambling establishment in Macquarie-street.

Comparing the quarterly statements of the two colonies, it will be seen tha the New South Wales yield of taxation was higher than that of Victoria ratably to population by an amount equal to £18,000 per annum, although Victoria had excise duties on tobacco and beer, a land tax in force, and duties on estates of deceased persons and on bank notes, while New South Wales had no taxes but Customs, stamps, licenses, and an excise on colonial spirits. Our stamp tax is twice as prolific as that of Victoria, because it is more widely operative, and our licenses four times as fruitful, because our Treasury claims the publicans' licenses, and in Victoria they are municipal revenue. Under the head of Customs which yield four-fifths of our whole taxation, and three-fourths that of Victoria, the protectionist colony surpassed the free trader by only £5684 during last quarter, in spite of her £89,286 from ad valorem duties. Relatively to population, the actual yield of Customs for the quarter was at the rate of 10s. per head in New South Wales, and only 9s. 1½d. per head in Victoria. Going down to the head of the services rendered, a singular feature is the balance of the railway income in the two colonies—£401,362 for the quarter in the northern, and £401,661 in the southern. That is most probably the turning point in this great field of intercolonial competition, and the mother may be expected henceforth to take precedence of her enterprising daughter in the magnitude and yield of the annual traffic. Our postal income for the quarter was £89,787 against £75,289 for Victoria. The marine service of New South Wales also brought in a larger revenue than the Victorian, exclusive of wharfage, which comes under taxation, somewhat improperly. For water supply Victoria received £44,354 and this colony nothing, for she is about the last to appreciate properly a form of national enterprise which she needs most. The difference between the revenues of the two colonies for the quarter is small under the heads both of taxation and general services, ratably to population, and it is only under the territorial revenue that we get the key of the position. Victoria received £187,447 on account of sales of land, and New South Wales £755,530. Deduct the Victorian rate, and it leaves Mr. Watson a sum equal to £2,272,332 as the difference between the Victorian and New South Wales revenue from land sales for one year, at the proportion of last quarter.

Taking the whole twelve months completed on the 30th June, it will be seen that the rate of taxation was equal to £2 8s. 3¼d. in New South Wales, and to £2 12s. 2½d. in Victoria. Our neighbours derived £433,614 from their heavy protective ad valorem duties, which means that foreign goods they were trying to keep out still found entrance into consumption to the extent of about three millions sterling in value, and that consequently consumers had to pay a correspondingly higher price on all similar local produce, in addition to the half million of duty on the produce imported. If that is nursing native industry, it is a very costly process. In spite of this nursing, the Victorian Customs receipts, which came from nearly every article of food and drink, and spared scarcely a single manufactured article in use among the people, exceeded those of New South Wales for the year by only £152,879, although our tariff is the most nearly a free-trade one out of the United Kingdom. But the Victorian fiscal system has one advantage over ours. For £1,695,466 from Customs it has also to record £216,171 from excise on colonial spirits, beer, and tobacco; whereas New South Wales had only £3334 on colonial spirits to record as excise, against £1,542,587 from Customs. That is a grave defect in our finances; and, if our Premier has paid any attention to such matters during his stay in England, he must be painfully struck with it upon his return. Other men have been labouring in this field while he has been enjoying the smiles of Courts, and the applause of peoples, and now he comes back in time to enter into their labours, if he is worthy of honour at the hands of the Cobden Club. Testing the taxation of the two colonies from another point of view, it is to be noted that Victoria derived last year £1,937,614 from what may be termed personal consumption, and £354,265 from property, against £1,654,067 and £228,517 respectively in New South Wales. The difference in proportion is not great, but in New South Wales the only tax that falls on property is the stamp duty, which affects circulating more than fixed capital, while Victoria taxes property by means of stamps, death duties, bank note duties, and a land tax, which proprietors themselves must pay. If the world were ripe for direct taxation, what an army of officials could be disbanded to return to productive employment; and what fraud, litigation, and restrictions upon trade and personal liberty would be swept away. It always costs more to govern a country badly than to govern it well, and perhaps that is one reason why so much skill has been displayed by rulers and their minions in concealing the hand of the tax gatherer.

The railways of Victoria last year brought in £50,240 more than those of New South Wales; but the Victorian Post Office was left behind by £47,078. Upon the marine service, so far as reported, this colony also had the advantage, but in water supply she had no set-off to Victoria's £126,611. The rain falls liberally enough upon our soil from the ocean to the Dividing Range, and our pastures need the gifts of Heaven, but we have yet to learn one of the plainest monitions of nature—to save up the surplus of one year for the scarcity of another. Putting together the revenue from all sources, except land, it will be seen that the rate per head last year was £5 9s. 2¼d. in New South Wales, and £5 8s. 5½d. in Victoria, a difference of only 9d. per annum for each inhabitant, or a total of £29,000 in favour of this colony. It is the land revenue for the year, as for the quarter, which accounts for our Treasurer's embarras de richesse. Sir Bryan O'Loghlen somehow finds himself "passing rich" on £826,196 a year from land; Mr. Watson received £2,853,996 from this source, or £3 15s. 8½d. for every man, woman, and child in the colony, against only 18s. 9½d. in Victoria, and we must wait till Parliament meets to learn what he has done, or means to do with it all. It is made up of £406,614 from pastoral, mining, forest, and other rents; £600,795 on account of interest, instalments, and balances from former conditional sales; £622,490 from new free selections covering an area of 2,489,960 acres of land; and £1,324,067 from auction and other forms of unconditional sale, for a probable area of 1,200,000 acres. When the Governor opens Parliament and is made to rejoice again over the flourishing state of the revenue, it may be as well for the public to remember that to keep up this vernal exuberance the Government have sold 3,689,960 acres of land between July 1, 1881, and June 30, 1882, and received besides over a million sterling from rents for the year, and on account of the extravagant sales of former years. In such a state of things it is almost a farce to ask the representatives of the people to vote supplies, and as to granting taxes, there is no need for that, for the Ministry, as long as this "rosy game" of coining the public acres goes on at the rate of between three and four million acres per annum could keep up even the present rate of expenditure without a penny of taxes from anybody. The wonder is, not that Parliament does not meet till the end of August, but that it meets at all. Nor does it deserve to meet if it cannot check the wholesale waste of the public domain, which has been condemned by nearly every member of the present Administration, but which they have galvanized into unnatural vitality by relaxing the Executive curb and applying the spur of special legislation.

THE DISASTROUS FIRE AT IPSWICH, QUEENSLAND.

The correspondent of the Brisbane Courier sends the following particulars of the serious fire that occurred there on the morning of July 1:—"About 2 o'clock this morning a bright lurid glare showed a conflagration was raging in the lower end of Nicholas-street. It was found that the block of buildings owned by Mr. Jackes, and occupied by Messrs. Smith Brothers, drapers; Melvin, confectioner; Finch, fruiterer and greengrocer; and Dr. Von Lossberg's chemist's shop, was on fire. A strong westerly breeze was blowing at the time, which drove the flames fiercely upon the outbuildings at the back. The alarm had scarcely been rung when a detachment of the fire brigade arrived on the spot, and immediately proceeded to use their best endeavours in arresting the flames. The origin of the conflagration is thus explained by Mr. Von Vultie, chemist, in the employ of Dr. Von Lossberg. It appears that during the evening Mr. Kilner, also a chemist in the employ of Dr. Von Lossberg, but who has recently been suffering from a broken leg, called to see Mr. Von Vultie, and brought with him two kangaroo dogs. During the time occupied in conversation one of the dogs went underneath one of the counters, fell asleep, and did not follow its master when he returned home. At 11 o'clock Mr. Von Vultie shut up the shop and retired to rest. About 2 a.m. he was disturbed by a noise as of something breaking into the shop. He immediately went into the front and struck a match. Scarcely had he done so before the whole place was in flames. Mr. Von Vultie is of opinion that the dog had broken a bottle of some explosive chemical, and when he struck the match the head must have fallen into it, and thus caused the immediate combustion; in fact, Mr. Von Vultie asserts that he is incapable of giving any definite opinion on the matter, as from the moment he struck a match everything appeared to catch fire at once. The theory of the dog being the innocent cause of the catastrophe is fully borne out by the testimony of Mr. Orr, the manager of the gasworks, who, on looking over the burning premises—when the fire had somewhat abated—in search of the gaspipe, found the charred remains of the poor animal just where he is supposed to have laid himself down to sleep after following his master into the shop on the previous evening. As soon as Mr. Von Vultie saw the state of affairs, he immediately called out to Mr. and Mrs. Finch, who occupied rooms directly over his shop, that the place was on fire, and to save themselves and property if possible. The warning, however, was too short, and the inmates had barely time to escape in their night clothing before the portion of the building occupied by them was one mass of flames. Mr. Melvin, the confectioner next door to Mr. Finch, had the greater part of his stock destroyed. Adjoining Mr. Melvin's was the newly-erected establishment of Messrs. Smith Brothers, drapers, &c., and which was completely gutted. The building was erected specially for this firm some few months ago. Smith Brothers' stock was insured in the Standard Insurance Office of London, for the sum of £1000. The buildings destroyed were the property of Mr. J. A. Jackes, and were insured in the Queensland Insurance Company for £1000. Dr. Von Lossberg had his stock insured in the National Insurance Company of New Zealand for £500. The other sufferer by the fire was Mr. D. Jackson, bootmaker, who sustained considerable loss in the removal of his property. The building was the property of Mr. Patterson, and was insured in the Queensland Insurance office for £100."

"DID NOT KNOW THEY WERE DOING WRONG."—An English paper says:—Two young gentlemen who had been picking primroses and violets in a plantation on Wimbledon Common said "They did not know they were doing wrong" in taking what certainly was not theirs, and refused to give their names or give up their pickings. They were, in consequence, locked up, and fined by the magistrate 1s. each. Another, who had plundered some birds' nests, was fined 20s. Absurd as it may seem, a vast number of persons, old as well as young, have the notion that public property, such as the above, is somehow their private property, and they think themselves very hardly used when they are told that taking what is not theirs is very much like stealing.

BOURKE TOWN,
FIVE DOCK.

Elevated Positions.

TO-MORROW WEEK.

WATKIN and WATKIN sell by auction, on the Ground, at 3 p.m., on SATURDAY, 15th July.
Choice allotments, having frontages to Pulling-street, Bowman-street, and Thomson-street.

The opening of the bridge (which is to be free of toll) between Balmain and Five Dock must bring to the front the northern portion of the peninsula of Five Dock, which up to the present, though less than three miles in a direct line from the city, is to 99 out of every 100 of its inhabitants an unknown region.
As long ago as 1840 Bourke Town was subdivided, and the great anticipations of its future then indulged in are only now about to be realised, for within a few weeks the bridge marrying Balmain with Five Dock will be opened, and the inaccessibility of this beautiful locality become a thing of the past.
The extension of the tramway to Ryde must still further enhance the value of land in Bourke Town.
Our advice to the vendors was to hold these lots until the bridge was opened. However, they have decided not to take our advice, but to sell; an opportunity thus presents itself to speculate worthy of notice.
The land is excellently situate, high, commanding extensive views.
The title is first-class.
The terms easy.
Special arrangements will be made to convey parties across from Balmain on day of sale, as also from Ashfield by 'bus.
Plans now being prepared.

FORT BOURKE STATION,
Darling River, N. S. W.

POWERS, RUTHERFORD, and CO. have received instructions from the owner to OFFER for AUCTION SALE at their Rooms, 79, Collins-street West, Melbourne, on TUESDAY, the 18th July, 1882, at half-past 2 o'clock p.m.,
The FORT BOURKE STATION,
with 100,000 SHEEP, 40,000 of which are EWES, now lambing.
This station is situated on the Darling River, to which it has a frontage of 30 miles direct, equal to about 90 miles water frontage. The estimated area is 370,000 acres of splendid salt and bush country; besides the frontage it is permanently watered at the back by tanks, dams, lakes, and a permanent billabong from the river.
The run is thoroughly fenced, and subdivided by wire fences (cattle and sheep proof) into 14 large, and small, paddocks.
The improvements are splendid, and not to be surpassed; woolshed, newly erected, of red gum and iron, for solidity and design, has accommodation for 56 shearers, sorting room and wool store, from which a tramway leads to steamer.
The homestead is of dressed bluestone, with verandah all round, and cost £5000, the fittings throughout being of the best description; there is an overseer's house, two cottages, all necessary outhouses; also, an extensive garden, laid on. With the present improvements the station is capable to carry 200,000 sheep, and from the ewes at present least 90 per cent. increase may be expected. The ewes selected from some of the best stations in Riverina, Moira and Barratta: the rams are first-class and great care, no expense being spared in procuring the best.
This is one of the finest stations in the market, stocked, and improvements thoroughly completed, requires to be done.
An immediate return will be obtained from the clip, number of lambs given in. The country is in splendid order, of rain having fallen this season.
Intending buyers should inspect this property and satisfy themselves of its excellence. It can be reached within a few days either Sydney or Melbourne.
Plans and full particulars can be had from Powers, Rutherford, and Co., Melbourne, or their agents, Ballarat and Sandhurst, or their different agencies.

To be Registered under the "Companies Act."

CAPITAL £90,000, IN 90,000 SHARES OF £1 EACH.

The proprietors retain 60,000 shares, fully paid-up, for the value of the mine.

Subscription is invited for 30,000 shares of £1 each, to be called up as follows:—On application, 2s 6d per share; on allotment, 2s 6d; in three months, 2s 6d; and the balance if required in calls of 2s per share at intervals of not less than one month.

No cash is asked by the proprietors; they are content with two-thirds of the profits, and dividends will, therefore, be paid on all shares alike, whether paid-up or not.

Francis Gill, Queen-street, Brisbane.

The property is situated on the Great Kennedy Silver-mining Field, on the main road to the Etheridge, and is only 48 miles from Townsville. It consists of 100 acres of freehold land. On the property are seven lodes of silver lead and other argentiferous ores of very rich character, as will be seen on reference to the numerous assays attached.

The ores vary in value from 100 ounces to 500 ounces of silver per ton of first quality ores, and from 14 ounces to 100 ounces per ton for second quality, and hitherto the ores extracted have given 1 ton of first quality to 3½ tons of second quality.

The average assays yield as under:—
Ores of first class... ... ... 222 ounces.
Ores of second class ... ... 67 ounces

Taking the above proportions as a guide, it will be seen that at the low price of 3s 6d per ounce for silver, less reducing charges 6d per ounce, the average value of the ore for this metal alone is £18 per ton.

The works are sufficiently advanced to allow of forty-six men being set to work on winning payable ores at the rate of 15 tons per diem, which will yield the following result:—

15 tons x 280 working days per year—4200 tons per annum at £18	£75,000
The estimate of labour and staff on the mine, including management, topmen, and 90 miners employed in winning ores and opening the mine, is per diem, £72 x 280	20,160
Profit per annum	£55,440

When the mine is properly opened there will be no difficulty in obtaining 50 tons of ore per diem instead of 15.

The details of this wonderful property will be understood on referring to the reports and the sketch and plan attached.

One of the tunnels has cut the main lode, 9 feet wide of ore-bearing material, 160 feet below the outcrop on the top of the ridge, giving backs for stoping to that depth, and for a length of about 1300 feet on the lode.

Another tunnel is driven into the south-eastern lode on its course, at a depth of 600 feet from the surface, and 800 feet from its junction with the main lode. The width of ore-bearing material in this lode is about 6 feet.

The mine is only scratched at present, and the capital subscribed will be wholly devoted to its development by putting the necessary machinery on the spot for raising and dressing the ores.

As additional assurance of the estimation in which this property is held by the discoverers, Mr. J. M. Kaufmann, who owns seven-sixteenths of the mine, undertakes to hold 20,000 of his shares for three years from the date of formation, and provision will be made accordingly in the articles of association.

Negotiations are in progress for contract with an English company to erect furnaces and reduce the ores at the price mentioned above—viz., 6d per ounce of the silver, and, if successful, the capital required for smelting plant, which is provided for in the sum of £30,000, subscribers' shares, will not be called up.

The only charge on the Company will be the commission and other ordinary charges of formation.

The shares will be allotted in the order of application. As the proprietors estimate the immediate outlay necessary at only £15,000, they reserve to themselves the right to close the list when 20,000 shares are taken up, reserving the balance for future issue when required. No allotment will be made of less than fifty shares. Five thousand shares are reserved for Queensland applicants.

SALE OF COLORADO SILVER ORE IN LONDON.

A parcel of 7 tons of undressed ore, of good quality, was sent to London at the beginning of this year, and the trustees at Townsville sent per telegram on the 30th May last, news that this ore had realised net the sum of £28 5s per ton.

This result fully bears out the statement and estimate in the Prospectus.

"Manager's Monthly Report,
"Colorado, 11th April, 1882.

"To the Proprietors, Colorado Silver Mine, Townsville.

"Gentlemen,—Since Messrs. Gamble and Bennett's inspection of your property, I have the honour to report:—

"We have cut through the hanging-wall of the lode in the tunnel at about 88 feet from the face of hill, viz., 76 feet from the outer set of timber. We then passed through three (3) feet of formation, and cut a lode of very rich carbonates and chlorides, which averaged about twenty (20) inches in thickness—5 feet. Beyond the footwall we passed through another four feet of formation; the total width, including hanging and footwall being nearly nine (9) feet. The lode has a very steep underlay to the east, being about one in six. The country through which the lode passes consists of argillaceous rock, mica slate, chloritic shale, and schist, much impregnated with sulphur, iron, and various other minerals, and intersected by numerous fine leaders, seemingly branches or feeders to the main lode. The assays taken from this lode, 100 feet below the outcrop, are as follows, per ton:—

Mr. C. Fiado, Charters Towers... ... Silver, 372oz. 14dwt. 12 gr.; lead, 63 per cent.
Messrs. Buckland and Bury, Charters Towers ... ... Silver, 455oz. 0dwt. 22gr.; lead, 75 per cent.
Mr. J. M. Kaufmann, Colorado... ... Silver, 461oz. 13dwt. 9 gr.; lead, 59 per cent.

For an average of nearly 430 ounces of silver per ton of ore. We have also begun the tunnel on the south-eastern lode, which on opening we found to contain a lode about two feet in thickness, and a formation of about 6 feet, the lode consisting of carbonates, sulphates, and chlorides, intermixed with oxides.

"The assays taken from this lode, which promises to be as rich as the ore in the main tunnel, have yielded 200 ounces of silver to the ton, with 70 per cent. of lead, as per Messrs. Fiado and Buckland and Bury's report. Also, we have discovered another galena silver lode, running at an angle through your selection No. 141 into No. 132, seemingly joining the main lode about the centre of No. 132 selection.

"In conclusion, I have much pleasure in advising that the mine is now in a condition to maintain forty-six men constantly engaged in extracting payable ore, and there is room for many more who could be engaged in opening other lodes not yet operated on, with a view to the profitable extraction of similar ore. I agree with Messrs. Gamble and Bennett that a deep shaft is requisite, &c. I herewith beg to enclose the monthly pay-sheet and estimate of ore at grass.

"I remain, Gentlemen, yours most obediently,
"J. M. KAUFFMANN, Mining Manager."

"Townsville, 14th March, 1882.

"The Proprietors of the Colorado Silver Mine, Townsville.

"Gentlemen,—We beg to report having visited and carefully inspected your valuable property, and herewith hand you our report thereon. The Colorado property forms an important part of what is known as the Star Silver Mining Field, situated about 48 miles from Townsville on the Etheridge-road.

"The property consists of one hundred (100) acres of argentiferous land, selected under the mineral regulations of Queensland. There are running through the property seven (7) distinct lodes, all of highly rich mineralized character. Our remarks, however, must be chiefly confined to two lodes, which we will distinguish as No. 1 and No. 2. At the first point we examined on No. 1 lode, a shaft had been sunk 66 feet into the vein, which was found to average 3 feet in width. Sixty (60) tons of ore were raised during the sinking of this shaft, 10 tons of which have been shipped to London, producing as per assay 200 ounces of silver per ton, and 55 per cent. of lead. A considerable amount of prospecting has been done at various other points on this lode, everywhere uncovering rich carbonates, sulphates, and sulphurets of lead all rich in silver. At the time of our visit a crosscut tunnel was being driven from a point on the eastern side of the hill, with a view to intersecting this lode at a depth of a hundred feet. We found that the tunnel had been extended to 81 feet, and it was calculated that another 10 feet driving would intersect the lode at the aforementioned depth.* This lode was cut at 88 feet; see report above. The object of this tunnel is to ventilate, and generally facilitate the workings of this part of the mine.

"No 2 lode has not been so extensively prospected as the one just described, but is equally strong and rich in outcrop, and traceable for a considerable distance through the property, the outcrop sometimes standing 3 feet above the surface of the land through which it runs.

"Your property may be described as a network of veins, composed of mineralized stuff ranging in produce from 60 to 500oz. of silver to the ton, and from 20 per cent. to 70 per cent. of lead; but in order to make your property a great and permanent success it is highly necessary that you cease your system of development, with a view to immediate extraction of ore, as that line of working must give place to a permanent system of operations, which should commence as soon as possible. Such operations will consist in first sinking a deep shaft of sufficient dimensions for all mining purposes—viz., hauling, pumping, climbing, &c. On such shaft reaching a depth, say, 'the base of the hill,' we would advise that crosscuts be extended from that point to intersect the whole of the lodes on your property, and on intersecting each lode driving would be commenced on its course, and ventilating shafts brought down from surface to accommodate such deposits of ore as would doubtless be opened up by such a system of development. During the time the work thus indicated is being prosecuted, we would advise that a necessary plant be obtained without delay—viz., engine crusher, hauling appliances, &c., so that you may be prepared for treating all classes of ore as soon as the lodes shall have been opened up at proper depth.

"In conclusion, we beg to thank your respected and energetic manager, Mr. Kaufmann, for the kind way in which he received us, and facilitated our inspection. Trusting that your property will, under proper management, prove a permanent success.

"We are, gentlemen, yours faithfully,
"J. BENNETT.
"JNO. Y. GAMBLE."

"Sydney, May 25th, 1882.

"Josiah Mullens, Esq., Hunter-street.

"Dear Sir,—Agreeably with your request, I beg to furnish you with the following report of the Colorado Silver Mine. Having recently visited the Kennedy district, I made it my business to inspect the above valuable property.

"This property is situated in a belt of hilly country (highly mineralised), principally composed of micaceous slates, and evidently some miles in extent. On one of these hills, about six hundred feet above the level of the surrounding country, the mine presents itself; traversing the surface, a perfect network of argentiferous lodes are traceable, and no less than seven strong outcrops present themselves, and, as far as prospected, all proving of a highly payable nature, and as the character of the strata is undoubtedly conducive to the permanency of silver lodes, an impression is at once made of the immense resources of this valuable mine awaiting development.

"On the eastern slope of the hill, and near the summit, the outcrop of the main lode occurs, showing a course of about N.E. and S.W., and is traceable more or less the whole length of the area, and shows unmistakable signs of permanency. On this lode, near the northern boundary of the 40-acre block, a shaft is sunk to a depth of 66 feet, carrying the lode down, and showing an average formation of fully 3 feet in width, with an underlay of about 30 degrees E. The formation here consists of galena, with oxides, sulphides, and carbonates rich in silver. A tunnel was being driven to intersect this shaft at a depth of about 100 feet, and, at the time of my visit, the hanging wall cut through, disclosing rich black carbonate ores, which has since proved to be a lode of over a foot of solid black ores, carrying over 500oz. of silver to the ton; the formation here proved to be over 5 feet in width, of high percentage argentiferous ores.

"Following the main lode southerly for about 15 chains the outcrop of the south-east lode occurs, and following this outcrop to near the eastern boundary a tunnel or drive is being put in on the course of the lode; here the width of lode is fully 3 feet, and at the time there was a bench of the lode stripped ready for breaking down fully 10 feet long by an average of 5 feet in height, the lode consisting principally of galena and sulphurets. Blocks of ore were lying here recently broken that would weigh considerably over 2cwt., carrying a high percentage of silver and lead. This is a very promising lode, showing a very strong outcrop, in places standing fully 2 feet above the surface, and traceable to near its junction with the main lode. About a chain east of this lode another lode occurs running nearly parallel, but taking a little more northerly course. Prospecting to a considerable amount has been done in these lodes, as also several lodes on the western slope of the hill, and all have disclosed highly payable ores, varying from 50oz to over 200oz silver to the ton, and as high as 70 per cent. of lead. As may be surmised from the shallow shafts and cuttings on the different lodes, it is a difficult matter to determine their widths, but from my observation estimate them from 5 feet to about 2 feet, and in these widths of formation I saw several solid blocks of argentiferous ores that would weigh over 180lb. to the cubic foot. (See samples and assays.)

"The features of the country present excellent facilities for working these lodes, more especially the south-east and east lodes, for an adit or tunnel can be put in on the course of the lode, and every 100 feet driven would gain about 70 feet of backs, the tunnel also serving to drain the mine. From careful observation, I feel justified in saying that this property requires no exaggerations whatever. The surface shows alone, together with the rich assay returns and geological features of the country, at once convinced me that this property is not a speculation, but an industrial enterprise, possessing all the elements of a commercial certainty, and will return handsome profits for the investment of capital.

"Yours faithfully,
"E. J. WARN, M.E."

* The lode has since been cut. See Mr. Kauffmann's report above.

P R O S P E C T U S
MONTEZUMA SILVER-MINING COMPANY
(No Liability),
STAR RIVER, NORTH QUEENSLAND.

This Company can be specially recommended to investors for the following reasons:—
The titles are granted to the vendors direct from the Queensland Government, and are, therefore indisputable.
The mine is situated only 40 miles from Townsville, and, consequently, under easy control.
The vendors are willing to accept £2500 cash, and £15,000 fully paid-up shares, indicating the confidence they have in the property.

Capital, £30,000, in 30,000 Shares of £1 each.

Payments: 2s 6d on application, 2s 6d on allotment; upon payment of which all subscribing shares will rank as paid up to 10s.

We invite subscriptions for the shares of the above-named company to work and develope the mining rights of a valuable property of 100 acres, situated on the Star River, and known as Morrison's and Ole Bye's Selections.

Captain R. M. Goodfellow, whose report is appended, states that—"There are several big lodes varying in thickness running right through the block, and that there are several other leader out-crops. It is easy of access, there need be no apprehension of a failure of water, there will be sufficient to meet the requirement the whole year round; that wood is in abundance, and can be easily and cheaply delivered at the mine. The climate is healthy, and Europeans can work throughout the year.

This company is formed to purchase and work two of the most valuable mineral selections in this justly celebrated district, which is destined at no distant date to be the Colorado of Australia. The selections are known as Ole Bye's, 60 acres, and Morrison's, 40 acres, which can be made freehold by the payment of 25s per acre. These selections have been taken up with great care on the famous Colorado line of lode in the first days of the rush, and the lodes have been found to traverse the whole length of the selections named, cropping up on the surface, and in measurement 5 feet wide.

The ground can be worked by adit in both selections, said tunnel can be driven at a cost of 30s per foot, and will cut the lodes at a depth of 400 feet.

The lode formation is soft, and is only pick and shovel work, so that once the lodes are struck an immense quantity of ore can be put out at a trifling cost. The assays mentioned are from what is known as firsts, or hand-picked ore, which exists in a solid seam about 14 or 15 inches in thickness, running in the lode. What is known as seconds is made up of the large body of lode stuff through which small spurs and branches of first-class ore converge to the big seam.

It is now an established fact that, with the simplest machinery for dressing the second-class ore, it can be raised to a much higher standard of silver and lead than the first-class. To a company in a position to erect this inexpensive machinery the seconds will yield large revenue.

In the adjoining mine, known as the Venture, the first lode has been cut in the tunnel close to Morrison's, and assays 192oz. of silver and 56 per cent. of lead.

The position as to supply of water and wood is abundant; Captain R. M. Goodfellow, whose report is attached, having given his special attention to this important feature. Communication with Townsville, distant about 40 miles, by good main road, is frequent and reasonable, and ere long the telegraph will be opened to the Star River.

The number of experts and scientific men who have inspected and reported on the Colorado lodes, justifies us in saying that no better venture exists than this now offered to the public.

We reprint some of the opinions on the silver lodes at the Star River, and mention that the Colorado mine, now working and valued at £75,000, is raising silver ore, giving over 500oz. of silver and 67 per cent. of lead to the ton. This ore is bagged and forwarded to Townsville, from thence shipped to London by monthly steamer. Arrangements can be made to secure a substantial advance from the banks on the ore, and in addition to this advantage the great smelting firms of England have established agents in Sydney who are prepared to purchase the ore by assay.

This obviates to a large extent the necessity of establishing smelting works; but should such a course be deemed expedient, the furnaces now in use in California are so inexpensive, easily worked, and portable, that no trouble need be anticipated on this account.

The opening up of legitimate mining, of this nature, will give to capitalists an opportunity of investing in mines which will ere long attract eager attention from England and Europe.

We give, herewith, assays of ore taken from the lode by Capt. R. M. Goodfellow.

Application for shares, together with the deposit of 2s 6d per share, must be left with the Brokers of the Company, from whom forms of application for shares can be obtained.

T. J. THOMPSON and SON,
130, Pitt-street, Sydney.

Extracts from Captain R. M. Goodfellow's Report on the Star River Claims, North Queensland.

"The run of the lodes opened at present and proved to be the best are the Colorado lodes; these lodes run for a distance of three miles. I made an inspection of the Colorado; the men had just cut through the lode in the tunnel. The seam of first-class ore is fully one foot wide, and is composed of black oxide of silver, assays from which have yielded as high as 480 oz. of silver and 60 per cent. of lead to the ton. About two miles north-west of the Colorado, and in the granite country, is situated the Montezuma Mine, known as Morrison's 40 acres and Ole Bye's 60 acres, making in all 100 acres. There is not much work done on this claim, but there are several big lodes running through it, with very good-looking ore to be seen on the surface, the lodes of which are five feet in width. These lodes run south-east and north-west, and underlie to the east. This selection stands in the best position on the Star River, and, to judge by the look of the lodes on the surface, they should be valuable when opened up; in fact this claim is the best on the field with one exception.

"The mine can be easily proved. Splendid site for putting in tunnels, any amount of wood, and good water. The price of carriage from Townsville is £4 per ton, and from the mine to Townsville £3 per ton. Good roads, abundance of grass and water. The main road to Georgetown runs through the Star River field, so that there will always be return carriage to Townsville."

HORDERN'S IN PITT-STREET.

This is a title which has become a household word in Sydney, and serves to illustrate once more the extraordinary results of sterling enterprise and business judgment. "Hordern's in Pitt-street" is an accomplished fact in the form of a pronounced business success; it is an establishment which has grown like a well-conducted newspaper, extending itself to almost every household, and rendering its existence to a considerable degree a necessity. The magic name of Hordern is justly of great weight in the trading world of these quarters, but no single branch of that family ever exhibited more resolute sticking to business, more energy, capability, and judgment, than the founders of this house of trade, Hordern's in Pitt-street. Mr. J. L. Hordern recognized that, in the centre of the city, in one of the most populous of our thoroughfares, a house conducting its business on new principles was much required. The premises, of which our artist furnishes two engravings, extend pretty well from George-street to Castlereagh-street, the only intervening space being Pitt-street, which, however, being paved with wood in splendid style, is but little obstruction. With its various departments on each side of the great thoroughfare, Hordern's in Pitt-street is a little city of its own, which presents without and within a scene of busy activity all the week round. Viewed from the street, the show windows and the interior of the principal department impress one with the idea that in an architectural sense it is about the most respectable thing Sydney has got for many years. The show windows have great capacity in height and depth; they are, in fact, impressively large, and the display within is at all times striking and grand. Entering the establishment, the feeling of the visitor is one of surprise and relief—surprise at the brilliantly lighted, cheerful aspect, and relief at finding a city drapery establishment on a scale that admits of freedom of movement, fullness of display, and completeness of ventilation. This extensive drapery department has a floor space of exactly 6000 feet, and is lighted from the roof in the most approved style, while the finishings are quite artistic. A rich flood of light illumines every nook and corner—a very essential thing for the buying public. The ceiling is very lofty, and handsome shelves run up in a neat arrangement from the floors. The counters, all in capital style, are ranged at the side and towards the centre, as required for the business of the sub-departments, of which there are fourteen. The arrangement of the stock is excellent, and an immense business can be done in the busiest time of the day without the slightest hitch or delay, and with absolute comfort and convenience to the public. Of the three great sections in this department, the one principally devoted to millinery and fancy goods is really handsome and attractive. The decorations appear to harmonise with the design, and the display is heightened by the thoroughly effective style in which a rich flood of light is obtained from the splendid skylights immediately overhead. It is not improbable that all first-class new establishments will take a practical lesson from these significant improvements, and we shall then have this much-desired change in general adoption. The fourteen sub-departments are: Haberdashery, hosiery, gloves, ribbons, lace, and fancy goods, Berlin wool (a speciality), dress stuffs, mourning, silk, Manchester, costumes, millinery, trimmed millinery, underclothing, &c. Some of the departments require as many as thirty assistants, and in the millinery sub-branches about twenty-eight are constantly engaged. Here are displayed all the novelties in hats, bonnets, and dresses, which are received every fortnight per mail and ocean steamer; and, in order to meet orders on the spot, in the way of trimmings, dresses, and mourning and wedding requirements, this branch is continually being fed by the work of nearly sixty dressmakers and milliners, working in another part of the premises. And now stepping across Pitt-street, there is ample evidence that "Hordern's, in Pitt-street," has aimed at, and succeeded in, creating in one centre a business that supplies all the requirements of the various conditions of life—the person and the household. On the eastern side of Pitt-street are two enormous establishments, which occupy space extending almost into Castlereagh-street. One is devoted to clothing, and the other to the carpet or furnishing warehouse, both of which have contributed as much as anything else to spread the name of Hordern's, in Pitt-street. The clothing department embraces men's and youths' clothing and general outfitting, and the figures ruling here, as in other parts of the establishment, are extraordinarily cheap. The business, of course, is conducted on cash principles, hence the enormous reductions permissible by the system. The main branch is about 70 feet deep, with a width of 30 feet, and the business transacted is very large. Overhead, is an enormous hat department, as extensive as the one below, and with a stock larger than is probably elsewhere to be found under one roof. The figures ruling are really an enigma. All the styles are, of course, the latest—a special line, being got ready for next summer, the light cork chamber hat, now to be reduced in figure to a minimum. The adjoining building is devoted entirely to furnishing requirements. The display in the carpet line is unique; and when it is remembered that this very branch has pulled down prices all over the town, it is not surprising that a great business is done. The stocks embrace the most valuable Turkey pile, and the newest and widest patterns in linoleums, oilcloths, &c., tapestries, curtain poles, cornices (the handsomest yet introduced), the new Venetian blinds, and the new patent spring roller curtains, for which latter Hordern's in Pitt-street is the sole agency in the colony. The department for the display and matching of the carpets, &c., is very extensive, and is well lighted from overhead. At the rear of this branch is the despatch room, which is one of the features of the business. Hordern's in Pitt-street deliver goods the evening of purchase, and having established a first-class country trade, their arrangements extend to wherever train, steamer, or coach will carry. After passing from this building one comes to a catacomb of other departments, such as the working milliners', the clothiers, the dressmakers', the trimmers', the shirt hands', the carpet sewers', all of which have separate branches. From 80 to 100 are here employed, and constant work is given all the year round; the working rooms are noticeably well lighted and ventilated, and they are presided over by the best experts obtainable. There are three different offices in these parts of the premises for the proprietors and the clerical staff, including one large office solely devoted to the English and foreign or importing branch of the business. By this means there is an effective check on the shipments, and the orders are all well timed to suit every variation of the seasons. It is in these internal arrangements that a true idea as to the extent and character of the trade of the house is obtainable, and to most of the business men in Sydney this would be slightly more than surprising. Rearmost are three capacious stores, each with three flats, where the wholesale business is done and the bulk and open stock are kept. Powerful hoists operate on all the floors, and there are other facilities for the despatch of business. Adjoining the stores is a six-stall stable, kept in first-class order. Thus have we run through the establishment so widely known as Hordern's in Pitt-street. Its ramifications are extraordinary, and cannot faithfully be described with pen or pencil. Personal inspection alone will convey a fair or adequate idea of its extent. Mr. J. L. Hordern, the founder of the house, has recently been joined by his two brothers, one of whom will represent the firm in England, and, with this accession of strength, greater developments may be expected. Giving constant employment all through the various seasons to nearly 160 hands, Hordern's in Pitt-street is doing its share towards the development of trade in this great metropolis. That it should have a continuance of its present popularity and success is only but justice to the enterprise that founded and conducted it.

THE AUSTRALIAN HOME-SHUTTLE SEWING MACHINE.
To prevent fraud and deception, every genuine Home-Shuttle Machine bears the AUSTRALIAN COAT OF ARMS, and the words "MADE EXPRESSLY FOR M. MOSS & CO."
20,000 in use in Australia, so they need no "puffing."
No. 1, Hand Machine, £4; No. 2, with treadle, £6; No. 3, with treadle, and cover to lock, £7.
M. MOSS and CO., Wynyard-lane.

QUITE BEWILDERING, IS IT NOT?—What a number of advertisements, and each one claims to have the real thing, the genuine article, &c.! My SEWING-MACHINE is worn out, and I want a new one, as there must be improvements on the one I have had in use all these years, which am I to select?
The answer to this is, that what you now wish to do, thousands have been doing and are doing. Find some of these people and ask their opinion. We know many sensible ladies who have had the W. and G. MACHINE for about fifteen years, or even more, and they have gone through the market and eventually showing their sound discernment of character (which so distinguishes the ladies of our land, if they will only rely more on their own judgment), they have chosen the old friend again, with the modern improvements of the Automatic Tension, and other matters. Anyone in a quandary will be put right in a twinkling, by the eloquence of these ladies in favour of their new friends of the old family of W. and G.
